LOSE INSULL TRAIL IN ITALY

FIND UNSECURED TAX WARRANTS BAR SCHOOL PAY

Aldermen Told Why Banks Won't Help.

The board of education has no possible chance to redeem all its outstanding 1928 and 1929 tax warrants by means of tax collections for those years, the council finance committee was informed yesterday. The outstanding warrants, largely in the hands of the investing public, exceed by millions of dollars the taxes still due the board for those years.

This information, cited as one reason why bankers are reluctant to buy school tax warrants, led aldermen to announce that regardless of their wishes in the matter, the city has gone about as far as it can in financing school pay days through city credit. An added factor was their knowledge, based on a previous communication to the council, that city employés cannot be paid for periods beyond Sept. 15, if the city gives the school board any more money this year.

Can't Be Financed.

"I think the finance committee can agree on this—that the teachers can't be financed much longer, if at all, from the sale of city corporate fund tax warrants," said Ald. John S. Clark. "We must sell the school board's own securities. The thing to do is to find some way to do this."

The committee will meet again Monday morning for suggestions on such a program. The tax warrant situation was but one of two reasons cited in possible explanation of the bankers' coldness to school loans.

The second reason, given as the personal opinion of the speaker, Victor S. Petterson, was that the banks are unwilling to grant further credit to the school system until the school teachers take the same 21 per cent cut that was imposed on city employés at the beginning of the year. By virtue of his position as deputy controller, Mr. Petterson is the city's principal accountant.

Sargent Is Speaker.

His appearance before the committee came after Fred W. Sargent, chairman of the citizens' committee on public expenditures, had given the committee a lengthy explanation of the banks' position in relation to the city's financial affairs. Mr. Sargent urged the aldermen to eliminate the $4,000,000 levy for the city's working cash fund from 1931 tax bills to be sent out Jan. 1. His plea failed. The finance committee, after Mayor Cermak had spoken in favor of the levy, voted to retain it.

Mr. Petterson's principal ammunition before the finance committee was a detailed statement of the taxes extended, the amounts collected to date, the amounts still unpaid, the tax warrants issued, those redeemed, and those still unredeemed, for various funds of the city and school board for the tax years from 1928 to 1932.

School Board Operations.

The most striking part of his report concerned the financial operations of the board of education for the tax years 1928 and 1929. Money borrowed through the sale of tax warrants in those years is still unpaid, and as a result these unpaid warrants still stand as a menace to the present credit of the school board.

Nine different funds of the city, public library, municipal tuberculosis sanitarium and school board still have unredeemed tax warrants for 1928. In only one case, however, are any of these warrants held by the public, the remainder being held by the city treasurer as investments of the city's aggregate of funds.

Exception Is School Board.

This exception is the board of education's building fund. It still has outstanding $2,079,000 worth of 1928 warrants, of which the public holds $729,000. Furthermore, there are not enough 1928 taxes extended and uncollected to redeem all of these tax warrants.

In his figures, Mr. Petterson made an allowance of 10 per cent of the total taxes extended for the loss and cost of collection. That was the usual allowance in years before Chicago fell into its present financial muddle. After deduction of this allowance for collection costs, there remains only $1,350,000 of unpaid 1928 taxes due the school building fund to apply against outstanding tax warrants totaling $2,079,000. That leaves $548,675 worth of warrants unsecured even by tax collections. And since the $1,350,000 of taxes still due this fund have been delinquent for more than

Assails Pork Barrel Record of Garner.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Oct. 7.—[Special.]—President Hoover today again lashed out at his political opponents in a militant speech climaxed by an appeal to the women of America to compare the Republican and Democratic records of the last three years and then vote for a continuation of the present administration in power.

Just as in his Des Moines speech earlier in the week, the President directed his major attack at the Democratic legislative record piled up last winter by Speaker "Postoffice Jack" Garner, Gov. Roosevelt's running mate. The President asserted that enactment of this legislative program featured by the bonus, tariff, and pork barrel public buildings bills would have thrown the nation from "the foundations of 150 years of careful planning."

Virtually Passes Lie.

The President's attack on his Democratic foes marked the third time in three days that Candidate Hoover has assailed the Democratic program and the second time in that period that he has charged that its adoption would wreck all chances for recovery from the depression. At Des Moines the President attacked the Democratic program as ruinous. A day later at Fort Wayne he virtually passed the lie to his adversaries in replying to insinuations that he was out of sympathy with the people in their present distress.

Gov. Roosevelt made it a long range duel between Washington and Albany this morning, with an indirect retort to the effect that the President's speech at Des Moines was "pork barrel campaigning."

Although during exchanges neither has mentioned the other's name directly no one on the side lines watching the 1932 political show entertained any doubts but that the opposing objectives during the last three days' exchanges were the White House on the one side and the statehouse at Albany and Speaker Garner on the other.

Assails Goldsborough Bill.

"These measures," he added, referring to the Patman two billion dollar bonus bill, the Goldsborough price fixing bill, and the Garner-Rainey public building "pork barrel" bills, would have put a burden of 4 billion 500 million dollars upon the country and "broken down every safeguard we have established to prevent pork barrel legislation." They would have created enormous issues of fiat money. They would have put the government into wholesale personal banking.

The President's remarks delivered over the radio were addressed primarily to the women voters of the nation. The program was arranged by the women's division of the Republican national committee as part of what was described as a "Hoover day" celebration. Mrs. Alvin T. Hert, vice chairman of the Republican national committee, introduced the President to his audience with the assertion that the womanhood of the nation would rally to his support in the coming election. The President spoke from the cabinet room.

Nation at Crossroads.

Mr. Hoover told his audience that the program advanced by Speaker Garner at the last session of congress represented the only "true expression" of the present program of the Democratic party. He declared that the nation stood at the crossroads and that the votes cast at the polls on Nov. 8 would determine the kind of America that will be existing 20 or 100 years from now.

To the Republican women of the nation the President sounded an appeal to get out and fight for votes until election day. He asked that women everywhere study carefully the reconstruction program advanced by the Republican party and compare it with the Democratic legislative record. He asserted that the election would determine whether "proven measures now winning this battle against depression shall be exchanged for unknown experimentz."

The President expressed the "confident hope" that, with the continued aid of women active in his cause, he would be reelected next month.

Share in Responsibility.

"Today I would ask the women of America to study deeply the issues before the nation," the President said. "Upon your actions rests a large measure of the responsibility for the future of our country. Upon those Flying Officer Wilfrid Bryan Page, assistant to the pilot, however, stuck by his companion until it was too late and although his parachute opened he was killed. The bomber burst into flames when it struck the ground. When rescuers reached him Gully was dead, his hands still on the controls.

Troops Guard Society Bride as She Weds

Taylorville, Ill., Oct. 7.—[Special.]—National Guardsmen with loaded rifles walked post around the home of Lloyd Kinney here tonight while Mr. Kinney's daughter, Mary, was being married to Henry H. Porter Jr. of 1520 North State parkway, Chicago.

It was explained that the guardsmen were stationed at the home after the Chicago police transmitted to the local authorities a report that gangsters were planning to raid the wedding and rob the participants and the guests, nearly all socially prominent. There have been numerous disorders in the vicinity recently, most of them growing out of mine troubles. The troops had been stationed in the Taylorville area because of these troubles.

No Disturbance.

The presence of the soldiery apparently overawed any prospective attempts to disturb the ceremony and the wedding was held as scheduled at 8:30 p. m.

The wedding service was read by the Rev. Theodore Hume of Chicago, a classmate of Mr. Porter's at Yale, before an altar of high banked palms, lilies, and gladioli. The bride, who was unattended, wore a white satin gown trimmed in rose point lace and a tulle veil with a rose point border. John P. Porter served as best man for his brother.

Guests at Wedding.

Guests at the wedding included the bridegroom's mother, Mrs. Prentice Porter; his sister, Miss Mary Porter; Mr. and Mrs. Henry P. Isham, Rockefeller Prentice, Mrs. Charles Daniel Frey, and Miss Betty Frey, all of Chicago; Mr. and Mrs. Lucius Hill of Boston, Mrs. Newton D. Baker III. of Cleveland, Miss Nancy Sands of New York, and Henry Suhr of Oil City, Pa.

Mr. and Mrs. Porter are to spend a two months' honeymoon at Manchester, Vt., and on their return will reside in Chicago.

REVEAL NUMBER CHANGING RUSE OF AUTO THIEVES

A clever automobile theft scheme was uncovered yesterday with the arrest of three men and a woman by Lieut. George Teeling and eight men of the auto detail, assisted by Assistant State's Attorney John L. Murphy.

Melvin Decker, 27 years old, of 7415 Kimbark avenue, was held as the leader of the band. The others under arrest are William Kale and his wife, Margaret, both 25 years old, of 6201 Princeton avenue, and John Small, 20 years old, of 5708 South Morgan street.

Small, who is employed in a large loop garage, has confessed, according to the police. He said he would steal the car body serial number plate from one car and copy its motor number. From another car of the same make Small would copy the ignition key number. This car would be traced by the thieves and stolen with the help of a duplicate ignition key which can readily be ordered from the number.

On the stolen car the stolen body serial plate and engine number would be substituted from the first car. That would give the thieves a car with numbers not reported stolen.

MILLS' WAGER OF $100 GOES TO ROOSEVELT FUND

New York, Oct. 7.—[Special.]—Secretary of the Treasury Ogden L. Mills, who has been the most active campaigner for the reelection of President Hoover, has contributed, indirectly, his own personal check for $100 to the Roosevelt campaign fund, Democratic national headquarters disclosed today.

Secretary Mills about a year ago, the headquarters announcement stated, made a bet of that amount with a prominent Maryland woman that Gov. Roosevelt would not be nominated for the presidency by the Democratic national convention. Mr. Mills paid the bet recently, and the winner, whose identity was not disclosed, indorsed the check and sent it to the Roosevelt campaign fund.

Photostatic copies of the check, and the indorsement on the back of it, were made public, with the name of the payee obliterated.

U. S. POPULATION 150 MILLIONS IN 1970, THEN HALT

New York, Oct. 7.—[Special.]—The population of the United States will attain a maximum of 150,000,000 in 1970, when it will become stationary, or even show a slight excess of deaths over births, according to conclusions reached by statisticians of the Metropolitan Life Insurance company.

Cleaning Shop Owner Is Slain on South Side

Fred Thomas Hackney, 23 years old, said to be one of the owners of the H and H Jeffery Cleaners' and Dyers' shop, at 2040 East 79th street, was found shot to death early today in front of an apartment house at 1402 East 66th street, where he had lived at one time.

Police who went to the scene said the murder in all likelihood was connected with the recent outbreak of terrorism in the ranks of the cleaning and dyeing industry, which has included bombings, sluggings and the destruction of property. Only yesterday six men were indicted as a result of confessions accusing them of bombing rural shop owners.

The body was discovered by Mrs. Leona Seaman, a waitress who lives at that address, as she was returning from work. Hackney was lying near the entrance to the building and was still alive.

Priests Tell of Horrors in Soviet Prisons

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

STOLBCE, Poland, Oct. 7.—Russia and Poland have just completed another change of prisoners at this frontier town. A barbed wire separates the two countries. The contrast between the prisoners is appalling.

Ninety-one communist agitators, who have been arrested in Poland for fomenting riots, murder and destruction of property, descended from a Pullman train here. Spick and span in white linen, laden with luggage, foodstuffs and contentedly puffing at cigars, they were conducted toward the barbed wire. In their number were five members of the Polish parliament, several White Russian communists and a large number of Jews.

39 Living Ghosts.

On the other side of the barbed wire came the soviet train bearing Polish prisoners, thirty-nine living ghosts. They tumbled out of two filthy freight cars. Their luggage was a few wooden boxes and paper bags. Fear was written in their faces. They believed it was another trap to carry them to a place of execution.

Most of the prisoners from the soviet train ran toward the frontier sign, "Rzecpospolita Polska." [Republic of Poland]. The communist agitators, who had just passed over the Russian frontier, were wiping the "capitalistic dust" from their shoes.

Several exchanges of prisoners have taken place between the Polish and soviet governments, exchanges which have saved hundreds of lives of innocent victims from rotting in soviet jails.

One of the most tragic occurred at Kolosowo on Sept. 18. Leizor Szadkowski, condemned to twelve years in prison for participating in the murder of a Polish policeman, cursed Poland, shaking his fist as he crossed the dividing line.

Prisoners in Rags.

Father Teophil Skalski, formerly papal administrator of the diocese of Zytomir, knelt and made the sign of the cross toward the country where he had been imprisoned for five years because he was a priest.

The exchange of prisoners lasted several hours. All the Poles were in rags. The priests looked the worst of all. None had shoes. Women wore old carpets and sacks as dresses. None of the men had shaved for months or had a haircut for years. There were 17 priests. Fifteen of them were Roman Catholic and two Russian Orthodox.

None had tasted meat or milk for five years. They unfolded stories of horror.

Father John Swiderski said he was arrested during church services at Ploskirow.

"I was beaten by G. P. U. agents until I fainted," he said. "I was kept without food and water for three days and then beaten again. For two years I remained in prison without a trial."

Casimir Naskrocki, another priest, said he, too, was arrested during church services. He was imprisoned first in Kiev and then in Kharkov. He said he was held four years without trial.

"My food consisted of stale bread, horse's flesh, and soup made from dirty water and stale potatoes," he stated.

Atheists Attack Church.

"For 28 years I had my parish in Winnica, county of Podolie, Russia," said Father Lillewski. "For the last few years my duties have been conducted under indescribable conditions. The atheist organizations constantly attacked my church. Every time I conducted a funeral service I was attacked. The hearse was stoned and mud and stones were thrown at me.

"We remained at our posts. On Jan. 18, 1930, I was arrested and sent

The Insull Search

Following are yesterday's chief developments in the efforts to extradite the Insulls:

1—Samuel Insull and his son, who vanished from their hotel in Paris Tuesday, traced across the Italian border to Turin, where they departed ostensibly to Florence.

2—State's Attorney Swanson takes immediate steps through the governor in Springfield and the state department in Washington to have Insull apprehended in Italy.

3—Martin J. Insull, in jail in Barrie, Ont., may seek freedom on bail today to carry on his fight against extradition.

4—County board, after acrimonious debate, votes $10,000 for use by state's attorney in extraditing the Insulls.

MODANE, France, Oct. 7.—The whereabouts of Samuel Insull, fugitive from extradition to Chicago, where he is under indictment on charges of embezzlement and larceny, has been determined by THE TRIBUNE.

Insull has been missing from his Paris hotel since Wednesday morning. Together with his son, Samuel Insull Jr., he arrived at the Hotel Palace, Turin, Italy, Wednesday night and left yesterday on a train for Florence.

According to the management of the Palace hotel, Insull declared that he was going to spend several days in Florence. When asked what hotel he was going to he said he had not decided and in any case did not expect any messages or letters at the Turin address.

Bare Secret Cable from Chicago.

That Insull's escape from Paris and arrival in Italy was known to some one in Chicago is attested by the fact that a long unsigned cable in code arrived at the Palace hotel, Turin, today. The hotel manager opened the cable in response to a telephone request, but declined to read the message over the phone. He offered to forward it to Insull at any address suggested. He was advised to send it to Insull, care of the American consulate at Rome. The message should arrive there tomorrow, where it will be available for the American authorities if they wish to intercept it.

The story of the Insulls' movements from the time they left their hotel in Paris can be reconstructed with considerable accuracy from information obtained by THE TRIBUNE at this frontier post. Insull and his son slipped out of the servants' entrance of the hotel around 10:30 o'clock Tuesday night, just three hours after THE TRIBUNE correspondent had announced to them the elder Insull's indictment by the Chicago grand jury. They carried only a light handbag, walked around the corner and hailed a taxi.

Unhampered at Border.

They took the 11 o'clock train for Rome at the Gare du Lyon. The train passed through here early in the morning and the pair were checked out by the French government police, who had no instructions to stop them, and were checked in by Fascist guards, who likewise had no instructions.

Arriving at the Palace hotel at Turin at 3 o'clock Wednesday afternoon, they spent the afternoon and night there. They left yesterday noon en route to Florence.

Their train passed through Genoa and along the coast of the Italian Riviera, but as yet there is no proof that the Insulls went on to Florence, as they had told the Turin hotel.

NO TRACE IN FLORENCE

ROME, Oct. 7.—Samuel Insull could not be found at any Florence or Rome hotel tonight.

Insull is supposed to have made a quick dash from France to Italy, where extradition is the subject of longer delays and impediments. The authorities in Rome are without any knowledge of Insull's presence.

It did not appear impossible that

Insull may have gone on to Naples to catch the liner Augustus, which sails for the United States Saturday, unless, as Paris advices report, he came to Italy to escape detection.

Insull is well known in Italy. Two years ago he is supposed to have acquired large interests in the Piedmont Hydroelectric company, commonly known as the S. I. P.

Portuguese Hunt Fails.

LISBON, Portugal, Oct. 7.—(AP)—Portuguese police, instructed to watch the frontier on the chance that Samuel Insull might come to Portugal from Paris, failed to find any trace of him today.

SWANSON ACTS

State's Attorney Swanson acted swiftly last night when advised that the trail of Samuel Insull, most widely hunted fugitive in the recent history of Cook county, had been picked up in Italy by foreign correspondents of THE TRIBUNE.

Shortly before midnight last night Acting Gov. Fred Sterling was requested to notify Secretary of State Stimson to notify Italian authorities to apprehend Samuel Insull Sr. The request was made in a telegram sent to Springfield in the name of Prosecutor Swanson by Assistant State's Attorney Charles Bellows. The telegram follows:

"Please ask Secretary of State Stimson to notify the Italian authorities to apprehend Samuel Insull Sr. Reported left Turin, Italy, for Florence. County authorities have guaranteed expense of extradition."

Traces Cablegram Clew.

Mr. Swanson proposed to take steps this morning to learn the identity of the Chicagoan who cabled Insull in code at Turin, Italy, and compel the sender, if possible, to decode the message.

The prosecutor instructed Bellows to procure subpoenas duces tecum ordering the Postal and the Western Union Telegraph companies to produce before the grand jury copies of any cablegrams addressed to Turin in the last thirty-six hours. Mr. Bellows said he anticipated that the companies would seek to resist the subpoenas.

Mr. Swanson further told Bellows to obtain passports and be prepared to leave on short notice for any European country where Insull might be found.

Inquiry among Chicago associates of the former utilities magnate failed to disclose the author of the cable. Gilbert E. Porter, personal attorney for Insull for many years, would neither affirm nor deny having communicated with his client.

If arrested in Italy Insull might be able to delay extradition longer than if seized in France, according to Chicago lawyers conversant with extradition procedure in the Italian courts. The Italian vice consul here, Antonio Ferme, said Insull could not escape extradition, however.

Explains Extradition Pact.

"Italy and the United States have an extradition treaty based on the same general principles as the Franco-American extradition treaty," Mr. Ferme said. "The treaty provides for extradition of any defendant accused of a crime which is also considered a crime in the Italian penal code. The only exception is for Italian subjects, the Italian government reserving the right to try such subjects in its own courts."

The exception, Mr. Ferme said, would not apply to Insull, who is a native of Great Britain and was naturalized as an American citizen in 1892.

Kills His Wife's Mother, Father, and Their Grandson

Greenville, Me., Oct. 7.—(AP)—Joseph Gagnon, 60 years old, his wife, and 3 year old grandson, were shot to death here tonight, police said, by Roland Willer, 22 years old, Gagnon's son-in-law. Willer was knocked unconscious by Gagnon's two sons. Mrs. Willer said she believed her husband's act was motivated by jealousy because of the attention and affection she had bestowed on the child.

Congressman C. A. Karch Gains After Operation

St. Louis, Mo., Oct. 7.—(AP)—Congressman Charles A. Karch of East St. Louis was recovering today from an operation in a St. Louis hospital yesterday for gall bladder trouble.

SEARCH CONTINENT FOR SAMUEL INSULL

The map indicates centers being combed in hunt for Samuel Insull, who with his son, Samuel Insull Jr., vanished from their hotel in Paris last Tuesday night. A Tribune correspondent in France has traced the missing pair into northern Italy, where they have disappeared again.

The Insulls are reported to have taken a midnight train out of Paris for Rome. They passed through Modane, a French border town, where they were checked through by the French police, who had no instructions to stop them, and checked in by Italian police. They spent Wednesday afternoon and night in Turin, where they told the manager of their hotel that they were headed for Florence. There the trail ended. A search in Florence and Rome last night showed no trace of the fugitives.

A search for the Insulls by police of Lisbon, Portugal, has also proved unavailing.

(Copyright: 1932: By the New York Times.)

PARIS, Oct. 7.—Evidence of a great financial scandal dating back about 2,000 years before Christ was uncovered by Dr. Claude F. A. Schaeffer of the University of Strasbourg in last summer's excavations of the royal tombs at Ras Shamra, northern Syria, he told the Academy of Sciences today.

A tablet found by Dr. Schaeffer shows that what is regarded as one of the world's earliest known financial crashes resulted from the irregularities of the finance minister of one of the kings of northern Syria. The minister, after a long period of excessive prosperity, took flight from the realm in a time of famine.

The absconding minister took refuge in the religious seat of learning, Ras Shamra, but his malfeasance in office was discovered and the tablet that Dr. Schaeffer discovered represents a veritable warrant issued by the north Syrian king for his minister's arrest and extradition.

According to information found by the archaeologist, the defaulting minister was actually arrested at Ras Shamra, but released on bail furnished in silver. His release excited the indignation of the king, who vigorously demanded his extradition and surrender.

NEW CANADIAN TARIFFS GO INTO FORCE THURSDAY

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

OTTAWA, Ont., Oct. 7.—Canada's new tariff structure, involving trade concessions to the United Kingdom, the Irish Free State, Rhodesia, and South Africa is to become effective next Thursday. Simultaneously the concessions accorded Canada by those countries become operative.

This speedy enactment of the provisions of the recent imperial conference was announced by Premier Bennett to the Canadian house of commons today. The house assembled for only an hour to pay tribute to the late Thomas McMillan, Liberal member for South Huron, who died recently, and to hear the government's proposed business schedule.

On Wednesday, said the premier, contents of all the agreements would be made public, tariff schedule changes introduced to parliament, and government motion made for their approval. They will be given the same precedence accorded budget enactments and will become operative, he said, on the succeeding day.

DIVORCEE SUES E. W. GROVE FOR HALF A MILLION

St. Louis, Mo., Oct. 7.—(AP)—E. W. Grove, wealthy chairman of the board of the Paris Medicine company, was sued today for $500,000 by Miss Sadie Thompson White, 24 year old divorcée, who charged that Grove, under the assumed name of C. C. Long, promised to marry her last Feb. 24 and broke his promise.

Miss White said she did not know at the time that Grove was married and the father of three children. Grove, in a hospital, declared there was no merit to the suit. He said he was casually acquainted with Miss White, but she had known him only by his right name.

Grove is the son of the founder of the Paris Medicine company, who died in January, 1927, leaving an estate valued between 10 and 15 million dollars in trust, with the income to be divided equally among his widow, his daughter, Mrs. Evelyn Grove Seely of Asheville, N. C., and E. W. Grove Jr.

FORMER BOXER DIES OF STAB WOUND.

Herrin, Ill., Oct. 7.—(AP)—Robert "Bosco" Young, 24, a Royalton miner and former featherweight boxer, died in a hospital here today of a stab wound he said he received in a fight at a dance at Royalton Saturday night. The knife blade entered his brain, but he worked a day after receiving the wound. He was unconscious when received at the hospital here today.

M. J. INSULL MAY OPEN FIGHT FOR RELEASE TODAY

Attorneys Seek to Get Him Out of Jail on Bond.

BY HAL FOUST.

BARRIE, Ont., Oct. 7.—Prisoner No. 23 in the Simcoe county jail today found behind the walls of his cell the seclusion which he had sought in vain in other places since June. Prisoner No. 23 is Martin J. Insull, who hurried away from Chicago after his brother Samuel's utility pyramid crashed last summer. He is now under arrest resisting extradition to Chicago, where he is charged with embezzlement and larceny from the Insull companies.

No reporters interviewed Insull in his cell. Canadian jails are not open to reporters. Col. D. H. MacLaren, the world war officer who is sheriff of this county, expressed surprise when he was questioned as to whether the ex-financier rested quietly in his first night behind the bars.

"Amused" at Curiosity.

"I'm rather amused at your curiosity," he said, dryly.

Col. MacLaren disclosed, however, that in the Barrie jail Insull lacks many of the comforts which would be his were he to allow Cook county authorities to take him back to Chicago as a prisoner.

The old stone jail here is a far different place from the huge, light, and airy structure which Cook county built a few years ago for its prisoners. Insull is kept with prisoners charged with serious crime on the second floor of the building, where no windows puncture the outer walls.

Eats Common Jail Fare.

He sleeps on a narrow cot, on a thin mattress, under a single blanket. His cell lacks the running water of the Cook county jail cells. He got a bucket of cold water for his morning ablutions. Matches and tobacco are forbidden him. He is an inveterate pipe smoker.

Unlike Chicago prisoners of means, he is not allowed to send out for his meals. He ate the common jail fare today. For breakfast he got oatmeal porridge [Sheriff MacLaren is a Scot], sirup, tea, and bread. The noon meal was a thin meat stew. Suppertime brought rice, tea, jam, and bread.

Insull had several visitors today Mrs. Insull called briefly. She left in an automobile with friends. Mr. and Mrs. H. A. Barker of Chicago. They returned to Orillia. J. R. Boys, one of his Canadian counsel, and Dr. C. S. Wainwright, a physician who attended him while he was living at the boarding house at Orilla, also called.

May Seek Release Today.

Insull is suffering no serious disorder, but it was hazarded that the testimony of his physician that confinement would be dangerous to a man of his years—he is 63—may be presented when his counsel ask that he be admitted to bail.

While the Insull attorneys refused to confirm the fact, it was reported that they intend applying for bail for their client tomorrow, probably before County Judge Dudley Holmes here at Barrie, who last night continued the prisoner's arraignment on the provisional warrant on which he is held until Oct. 14.

Edward J. Bayly, the Canadian attorney who is special counsel for Cook county in the extradition proceedings, disclosed that he had been approached during the day by the Insull attorneys, who had made overtures for bond. No agreement was reached, however.

Hampton Returns to Chicago.

Assistant State's Attorney John Hampton of Cook county, who flew here Wednesday night from Chicago to obtain Insull's arrest, went back to Chicago by plane today. Before he left he said that Cook county authorities will oppose vigorously any attempt of the prisoner to obtain bail. He asked Mr. Bayly, in case application is made, to ask a continuance of the hearing until a member of State's Attorney Swanson's staff can come from Chicago to oppose the plea.

Swanson Wins His Battle with County Board for $10,000 Fund for Extradition of Insulls

State's Attorney Swanson faced twelve hostile Democrats and two friendly Republicans yesterday in his demand for a sufficient fund to investigate, extradite, and prosecute Samuel and Martin Insull, who are charged with larceny and embezzlement in the collapse of the two billion dollar Insull utilities pyramid.

The county board yielded to the extent of granting Mr. Swanson "any reasonable sum not to exceed $10,000" for the specific purpose of extraditing the Insulls, with a pledge to appropriate more if and when necessary. The vote was 11 to 3, with Mrs. E. J. Fleming, Mrs. Glenn E. Plumb, and Miss Amelia Sears voting no.

The prosecutor was finally granted $10,000 for the specific purpose of extradition, when Emmett Whealan, president of the board, moved that "any reasonable sum" up to that amount be transferred to Mr. Swanson's depleted contingency fund from the jury fund. The final vote was eleven to three for the motion, with three feminine commissioners, Mrs. Edward J. Fleming, Mrs. Glenn E. Plumb and Miss Amelia Sears, voting no.

The county board acted only after President Whealan had been summoned before the grand jury which returned the Insull indictments, where, it was reported, he gave the jury foreman, Thomas Kinsella, assurance that the board would not hamper the prosecutor's effort to bring the Insulls to justice.

Democrats Oppose Swanson.

The appropriation finally was approved after two hours of acrimonious debate, during which the Democratic commissioners cited such apparently irrelevant cases as the Lindbergh kidnaping and the federal prosecution of the Minneapolis utility operator, Wilbur Foshay, to justify a refusal of Mr. Swanson's request.

In casting their negative votes Mrs. Fleming, Mrs. Plumb, and Miss Sears justified their attitude by declaring their fear that an affirmative vote would place them in the position of lawbreakers, liable to fines, imprisonment, and ouster from office if they made any appropriations after the budget had been passed. Their avowed position was that the state's attorney should wait until the board begins drafting the new budget six weeks hence.

Debate on Swanson Request.

The debate, or as much of it as could be transcribed with three or four commissioners frequently speaking at once, was as follows:

PRESIDENT WHEALAN—If you've already exceeded your appropriation by $50,000, why do you come back for more? You never asked for another $10,000. You've been asking for another $50,000. There's still $3,500 in the fund to return fugitives and it says nothing about petty cash.

GEORGE MILLER—That's a revolving fund and it should be considered as a petty cash fund.

MR. WHEALAN—If you find any reference to petty cash in that appropriation, I'll eat it. I ain't so dumb I can't read.

MRS. FLEMING—What about the Jake the Barber case? You know Senator Glenn fought Jake the Barber's extradition to England. I'm only asking as a point of information.

The state's attorney wearily explained that the case of John (Jake the Barber) Factor, a Chicagoan charged with swindling English investors out of $6,000,000, was beyond jurisdiction of his office and the debate went on.

Threatens to Break Up Staff.

MR. SWANSON—I'm here to tell the county board that unless I am granted sufficient funds to carry on the Insull investigation I shall call in my staff and inform them that your board has refused appropriations for expense, and then invite my staff members to resign if they please. If this happens and the county experiences an outbreak of crime as a result of the breakdown in the prosecutor's office, the responsibility will be squarely upon you ladies and gentlemen.

MRS. PLUMB—I resent your remarks, Mr. Swanson. I'm not going to sit here and let you accuse the members of this board. I remember how you demanded money for your trip to New Jersey on the Lindbergh case and threatened to place responsibility on us there. Everybody knows the Insulls should have been investigated in 1910, not in 1932. Why did you let them out of the country in the first place?

By this time three or four commissioners were clamoring at once. Commissioner Miller observed that the county had a Democratic state's attorney in 1910. Commissioner Dan Ryan asked what difference that made. Commissioner Charles Weber inquired just how much cash the state's attorney was asking. President Whealan stood up, drew a deep breath, and began to shout.

Whealan Promises Fund.

"Everything I've heard is Whealan this and Whealan that!" he roared. "All I said was that I was trying to get two weeks' pay for the distressed employés of Cook county. Now the cry is that the Insulls won't be brought back because the county board wouldn't give a paltry $10,000. And the average citizen, who is the most gullible creature in the world, is beginning to believe it.

"I'll stand here and read it into the record that Whealan will guarantee the fund to bring the Insulls back. I'm for getting them back. I make a motion that we want to help and cooperate and we'll give him the $10,000, regardless of politics; this board is functioning for the people; we can transfer it from the jury fund."

The clerk called for a vote.

Against Law, She Says.

"It's against the law," cried Mrs. Fleming. "The statute says the county board shall not appropriate any moneys after the budget has been passed except in the emergency of fire, flood, or disaster. Mr. Swanson, do you consider this a disaster? Are you going to sit there and urge this board to break the law?"

"What about the $9,000 appropriation for Judge Fisher's special grand jury?" interjected the Republican commissioner, Miller. "Did you consider that a disaster?"

President Whealan again got the floor.

"I voted for the Fisher appropriation," he shouted, "and I'd do it again. I'm not a brave man and I'm not a coward, but I tell you there's a reign of terror in this town, with unions barricaded against gunmen and thugs prowling the streets. Don't kid yourself; don't try to tell us what to do. I know what I'm talking about when I say that the chief of police without solicitation offered me a bodyguard to protect me from gunmen. We're in ill repute and we're in bad standing. We need the Fisher grand jury investigation."

Raber Presents Claim.

Thirty minutes' further discussion of this character brought the matter to a vote. Edwin J. Raber, who as special assistant state's attorney procured the conviction of the former banker, John Bain, closed the meeting with a claim for bills incurred by him and attacked the policies of the state's attorney's office in meeting bills. As Raber's criticism grew sharp the commissioners shut him off.

FORMER ENVOY IN U. S. MAY BE IRISH GOVERNOR

DUBLIN, Oct. 7.—(AP)—Stephen O'Mara of Limerick, who was an Irish spokesman at Washington, D. C., during the era of the "Black and Tans" from 1919 to 1921, probably will be asked to accept the post of governor general of the Irish Free State to succeed James R. McNeill. This was reported here today.

The appointment is expected to be made some time during the next three months, the Irish Independent said.

Gov. Gen. McNeill, who resigned early this week, will continue to hold his post for several days, the paper said, before handing over his duties to Chief Justice Kennedy, who will act as governor general until a successor is chosen.

S.W.STRAUS,N.Y., IN RECEIVERSHIP; FRAUD CHARGED

Enjoined from Dealings in Securities.

New York, Oct. 7.—(AP)—Supreme Court Justice Alfred V. Norton announced today that he would appoint a receiver shortly for S. W. Straus & Co., big real estate and bond concern.

In granting the application of Attorney General John J. Bennett Jr., the court announced that a receiver, to be selected later, would take immediate charge of the concern.

Officials of the company announced that Chicago Straus companies are not involved in any way.

Injunction Also Granted.

Justice Norton also granted an injunction which restrained the sale of further bonds unless the prospective buyers are given exact and true information concerning the status and value of the real estate security upon which they are based.

This type of injunction, requested by the attorney general, in effect gives the attorney general the power to regulate further bond sales.

The government charged that the company had sold bonds on property on which it knew there had already been a default. The company denied this.

Justice Makes Statement.

Justice Norton, whose court is in Brooklyn, said the injunction relief asked for was not too extensive, adding "it is no more than commensurate to the harm already caused to the thousands of trusting investors."

"I am fully satisfied," he said, "upon the record before me that the defendant permitted an unsuspecting public to purchase the so-called 'Straus bonds' in the belief that S. W. Straus & Co., Inc., was issuing the same as a direct obligation and in consequence was responsible thereof."

Points to 1924 Issue.

He said it appeared that the company, which had advertised itself as a first mortgage real estate bond house, had in 1924 issued "general mortgage bonds" secured by other than first mortgages on real estate.

"Unfortunately," the justice said, "the buying public was not composed solely of individuals who were acquainted with the treatises of the investment authorities, but rather consisted of individuals from all walks of life who did not have the opportunity or the experience in investment matters to understand the significance and the value of the 'general mortgage.'"

He said that in the years 1928, 1929, 1931, and 1932 the company distributed literature which "still confused the general public with respect to the nature of the bonds being sold."

Charges Sales After Default.

"The further charge is made," he said, "that, at least since January, 1928, these defendants sold hundreds of thousands of dollars, and perhaps an aggregate of millions of dollars worth, of real estate bonds to the public at a time subsequent to default in payment of interest and principal on the mortgages or in the payment of taxes upon the mortgaged property. These bonds were represented as being in good standing at the time of sale to the public.

"Such practices certainly were not consistent with the representations as contained in their circulars diffused to the public.

Points to Circular.

"It is tragical, to say the least, to compare the practices as engaged in by the defendants with the glowing representations of good faith set forth in the particular circular issued by the defendant which says, 'We regard our interests as identical with the interests of our clients. We represent the investor, not the borrower.'

"This promised protection was negatived by the subsequent course of conduct characterized by concealment and by failure to make frank disclosure of existing material facts.

"Mistaken Conception."

"The defendants were laboring under the mistaken conception that they were under no duty to make disclosures to prospective purchasers except in answer to specific inquiry."

In an entirely different court action the Appellate division today upheld a Supreme court decision which enjoined the Straus company, along with the Continental Bank and Trust company and the 502 Park Avenue corporation, from going through with a reorganization plan affecting the Hotel Delmonico at 502 Park avenue.

The suit was brought by a bondholder who declared the reorganization plan was "promulgated" by a "Straus committee" and did not sufficiently protect the rights of security holders.

Roberts Makes Statement.

"In so far as many of the practices complained of by the attorney general were ever employed by S. W. Straus & Co., they were voluntarily discontinued by them more than 18 months ago. The case will be promptly and vigorously appealed. My associates and I are confident that on appeal the action of the court will be reversed.

"Holders of bonds underwritten by S. W. Straus & Co. should not be alarmed and sacrifice their holdings at less than their real value. This temporary action of the courts, if reversed, will not adversely affect their interests.

"This decision does not involve S. W. Straus & Co., an Illinois corporation; S. S. Straus & Co., a California corporation; the Straus National Bank and Trust company of Chicago; Super-Corporation; or S. W. Straus Investing corporation."

CHICAGO COMPANY SEPARATE.

M. L. Straus, vice president and executive head of the Straus National Bank and Trust Company of Chicago, said last night: "Straus National Bank and Trust company is an independent institution and is not financially dependent on any other corporation. Its future is in no way interwoven with that of any other institution."

Sidney H. Kahn, vice president of S. W. Straus & Co. of Illinois, issued the following statement: "The corporation involved in the receivership in New York is S. W. Straus & Co. of New York. S. W. Straus & Co. of Illinois, which is a corporation operating in Chicago and throughout the middle west, is not in any way involved in the proceedings or affected in any way by the action of the court. We have no details as to the decision of the court which was rendered without any of the attorneys representing S. W. Straus & Co. of New York being present."

TILLIE SCHWARTZ SENT TO JAIL FOR PAROLE BREACH

Judge Ignores Tears and Pleas of Friends.

Mrs. Tillie Becker Schwartz, owner of a hat shop at 847 North Michigan avenue, was locked up in the House of Correction at 6 o'clock last night. She was sentenced yesterday by Municipal Judge Thomas A. Green to serve 15 days for violation of probation which had been granted her after her conviction of reckless driving.

The woman was held in custody of a bailiff during the afternoon when her attorney, Leopold Melnick, indicated he might seek a writ of habeas corpus for her. No writ was presented, however, and at 5 p. m., Mrs. Schwartz, despite her tearful protests, was taken out to the prison.

Tears Wasted on Court.

Garbed in an attractive black and white ensemble, with a black velvet hat on her blonde head, and wearing a sable neckpiece, Mrs. Schwartz pleaded with Judge Green that she was not guilty of an intentional violation of her probation. The judge declared, however, that he was determined to see that she spends the next 15 days behind bars.

Last November Mrs. Schwartz was arrested by Capt. John Ryan after her automobile had collided with his car and she sped away. Charges were made that she had been drinking. Tried by a jury last January, she was found guilty of reckless driving and leaving the scene of an accident, and Judge Green imposed a sentence of one year in jail and a $200 fine.

On the plea of Capt. Ryan, however, the sentence was amended to six months on probation. Mrs. Schwartz failed to report monthly to the probation officer, as required by the probation law, and was arrested yesterday.

Influence Fails to Help.

"I'm going to make an example of you," said the judge. "All sorts of wealthy people and politicians have interceded for you, but the probation law cannot be flaunted. You apparently believe you can get away with anything because of your connections. You'll go to jail for 15 days and learn to have some respect for the law."

Mrs. Schwartz is reputed to have inherited a fortune from her grandfather, Isadore Heinrich, who was a diamond miner in South Africa.

THREE MORE ARE HURT IN RODEO; ONE IS WOMAN

Spectators at the second annual world's championship rodeo saw three more performers injured in the Stadium last night, among them Miss Lucyle Roberts of Ardmore, Okla. Thus far thirteen have been hurt, but Miss Roberts was the first woman casualty.

Miss Roberts was thrown off a bronco and suffered a sprained left ankle. The others injured were Gordon Bryant of American Falls, Idaho, and Bob Crosby of Kenna, N. M., world's champion calf roper. Bryant's left arm was broken when his mount crashed into the arena fence. Crosby injured his leg when he was dragged by a bronco.

The cowpunchers made up a purse last night for Marvin Kelly of Englewood, Kas., the first performer hurt at the rodeo. He is at the West Side hospital, still paralyzed from a fall. The rodeo will hold afternoon shows today and tomorrow and will close with a performance tomorrow night.

EVANSTON MAN ADMITS BURNING HOUSE TO WED

Bijou Peterson, 40 years old, a civil engineer employed by the city of Evanston, was held to the grand jury yesterday in bond of $7,500 by Justice of the Peace Max Borchardt of Evanston, on two charges of arson. The charges were made by the state fire marshal after investigation of a recent fire in a house then rented by Peterson at 1629 Oak avenue, Evanston.

One warrant charged him with burning the house, which is owned by R. D. Cunningham. The second charged Peterson burned his furniture in an attempt to defraud an insurance company. Witnesses said he had taken out two insurance policies totaling $4,000 on the furniture which was valued at $1,900.

Peterson, who lives at 700 South boulevard, Evanston, confessed, according to Justice Borchardt, and admitted that he planned to get married and needed some new furniture.

He sought to escape payment of the fine by contending that he was penniless. Judge Prystalski, on discovery that Miller had transferred his property to his wife before filing the pauper's petition, denied the petition three weeks ago.

Petterson Tells Aldermen Why Banks Hesitate.

Situation Worse for 1929.

For the year 1929, the situation is much worse. For that year the three principal funds of the board of education all have tax warrants outstanding in excess of the amount of taxes which they reasonably may expect to receive from collection of delinquent 1929 taxes. All of these unredeemed warrants, practically, are held by the public.

The school educational fund still has an expectancy, by Mr. Petterson's figures, of $11,598,491 in 1929 taxes. But it has outstanding $13,730,000 in 1929 tax warrants held by the public besides $2,000 in the city treasury. That leaves a deficit of $2,133,508 which cannot possibly be met by the tax collections which are the security for the warrants.

This takes into account the face value alone of the outstanding warrants, without regard to the interest which has accumulated. This interest, Mr. Petterson told the committee, would increase the deficit on the 1929 educational fund warrants alone by $2,900,000, and on the other funds by corresponding amounts.

The school building fund still owes holders of 1929 tax warrants $4,569,000, and has still due it only $3,939,421, leaving a deficit of $629,578. The school playground fund has outstanding warrants of $135,000, and its tax collection expectancy of $118,183 still leaves a deficit of $16,816.

Budget Makers Use Guesswork.

There are two reasons, it was explained, why these taxing bodies were able to issue and sell tax warrants in excess of the amounts which, it developed later, they were able to levy in taxes. The 1928 and 1929 budgets of various taxing bodies were made up while the reassessment was in progress. The budget makers had to use guesswork in estimating the total which the assessment rolls would reach, which in turn governed the amount of revenue they could raise by applying the maximum tax rates permitted them by law.

As it now turns out, they guessed too high. Some of the officials were warned at the time that their estimates would not pay out, but the old city hall administration, which also controlled the school board, was not amenable to suggestions that it reduce the number of its payrollers.

A second reason for the present deficits was the long delay in the collection of taxes, and the tax strikes which have prevented collection of sizeable percentages of the tax levies. During all this delay the interest on the tax warrants continued to roll up until now there isn't enough cash in sight, even if all delinquent taxes were paid, to pay off all the warrants.

The 1930 legislature made provisions for protecting the tax warrant holders, through the issuance of bonds to make up the deficiencies, when the danger of the present situation first appeared. The school board was authorized to issue $5,200,000 worth of such bonds, and the sum was later increased to $7,500,000. The board has sold $5,430,000 worth of these bonds and retired warrants with them. The remaining authorized issue, $2,070,000, would not cover the deficits existing.

No Market for Bonds.

The city government was also granted power to issue bonds to make up tax warrant deficiencies in any year up to 1935, the amount of the bond issue being limited only by the size of the deficiency. It has not issued any bonds, according to John A. Richert, chief of the finance committee staff, because it has been unable to find a market for them.

Mr. Petterson's figures apparently failed to convince the members of the finance committee that the situation was a sufficient reason for banks to refuse to buy the school board's tax warrants. He was pressed with a number of queries as to why such sales cannot be made.

"My frank opinion," Petterson said at length, "is that the banks won't buy school board tax warrants because the teachers haven't taken a 21 per cent pay cut, as have the city employés. The bankers haven't told me this, but that's my opinion."

"That's the truth," said Ald. Oscar F. Nelson [46th]. "I understand that the teachers have taken a cut of approximately 10 per cent in shortening the school year. They shouldn't be starved into taking a larger reduction."

Mr. Petterson suggested to the aldermen that Gov. Emmerson call a special session of the legislature, concurrent with the one now meeting at Springfield, to pass legislation providing for the payment of all 1928 and 1929 tax warrants still outstanding.

"Expenditures against the 1931 corporate levy of $50,009,810 were $41,450,000," Mr. Sargent told the finance committee in arguing for abolishment of the working cash fund levy. "This gives the city a margin of $9,000,000, or almost 25 per cent, of expenditures over expected income. If you levy $4,000,000 more for the working cash fund, that increases the margin to 33 per cent. Our committee feels that that is too much.

"What we want to do is find a way to collect taxes. We must not impose the burden of those who are unwilling to pay upon those who do pay, but that's what happens when you levy this larger margin.

"There is a likelihood of collecting more taxes on the 1931 bills if you can show a reduction in those bills. Otherwise, you invite more tax rebellions."

Business Men's Orchestra Practices for Coming Season

Indict Six in Cleaners' War Bombing After Two Confess

Six men were named in an indictment voted yesterday as a result of confessions regarding bombing and vandalism in the war between rival cleaning and dyeing organizations. State's Attorney Swanson said other indictments would follow and at least one murder might be solved.

The indictment charges destruction of property, involving the $3,000 damage caused to the plant of the City Dye Works, 3010 West Lake street, last November. Five of those indicted are business men and the sixth, J. G. Flanagan, is said to be a hoodlum, formerly a sheet metal worker in New York, who came to Chicago last October and was without money until he received $2,100 for bombing the dye house.

Name Alleged Sponsors.

Lewis Williams and Lewis Hollman, owners of the Michigan Cleaners, 1339 West 63d street, were named as the men responsible for the bombing. Morris Cohen, owner of a cleaning and dyeing shop at 2202 West 22d street, and Walter Silver, owner of a shop at 1242 North Kimball avenue, both of whom confessed, are named as go-betweens, along with John J. Klein, owner of a shop at 6441 South Green street. Hollman and Flanagan are not under arrest. The others are.

The indictment was obtained hurriedly from the grand jury yesterday morning because a writ of habeas corpus had been obtained for the release of four of the prisoners. Chief Justice John Prystalski of the Criminal court first delayed hearing on the writ and then dismissed it after the grand jury had acted.

Assistant State's Attorney Charles Lounsbury, who conducted the investigation which resulted in the arrests, said the indictment covered only the one bombing, but later true bills would be obtained in other bombings for which the five men are held responsible. As far as he knew, Flanagan was only employed for one bombing, Lounsbury said.

Sign Immunity Waivers.

Cohen and Silver signed immunity waivers and testified before the grand jury. They told of conferences they held with Williams and Hollman who decided upon a series of outrages against their business rivals. The industry for years has been torn with conflict between rival groups and both sides suffered from terroristic tactics, Cohen and Silver stated, and Williams and Hollman wanted punishment inflicted on enemies affiliated with the Cleaning and Dyeing Institute.

Cohen and Silver said they often heard Williams and Hollman talking about Benjamin Rosenberg, former manager of the International Cleaners and Dyers, Inc., who was slain last Jan. 11 in Maywood by gunmen. Often they said they would "like to see something happen to Rosenberg," the confessing witnesses said. Prosecutor Lounsbury said this phase of the investigation would be followed up immediately.

CRIMINAL COURT.

BUSINESS MEN'S ORCHESTRA GOES ON 12TH SEASON

90 Attend Opening Practice.

Some ninety men, including lawyers, doctors, business leaders, clerks, a butcher, a clothier, a railroad man, and a former college professor, made up the membership of the Chicago Business Men's orchestra, which met last night to resume practice for the twelfth season.

They presented an aspect of Chicago's life which has been given little publicity, Director Clarence Evans commented as he prepared to wave the baton. He recalled that two Oxford university professors who attended a practice session last year expressed bewilderment.

An Amazing City.

"Those two Englishmen had visited the stockyards and had been regaled with tales of gangster murders," Mr. Evans remarked. "Then they heard these nonprofessional, musically inclined business men practice for three hours. They went away thinking Chicago the most amazing city in the world."

Others at Practice Session.

$7,500,000 FUND TO FALL SHORT OF WELFARE NEEDS

Expect Agencies to Conduct Fund Campaigns.

The $7,500,000 to be raised by the Emergency Welfare fund of Cook county for relief other than unemployment this winter will meet only about 50 per cent of the total estimated needs of the 101 agencies already included in the drive, according to an announcement yesterday by Ernest S. Ballard, chairman of the plans and estimates committee of the fund.

The other 50 per cent of the total estimated needs is expected to be raised by the various agencies themselves, Mr. Ballard said. Some $16,000,000 is required by the 101 agencies.

"All agencies have been asked to solicit their usual contributors for at least 75 per cent of their total contributions of last year," said Mr. Ballard. "The $7,500,000 fund which we seek to raise will provide the other 25 per cent and an additional percentage representing the increase in the volume of welfare work necessary this year over last.

Aid 15,000 Families.

"Among the welfare activities, to which the fund will contribute, is the care of 15,000 families a month whose economic problems, bad enough in themselves, are complicated by circumstances that demand a longer period of extensive care. Such care is the normal responsibility of our family welfare organizations, even in prosperous years, and is not paid for by public funds.

"The fund will assist in providing food, shelter, and clothing for approximately 5,275 homeless children. It will carry part of Cook county's annual responsibility to 102,000 stranded travelers, delinquent boys and girls, helpless immigrants, neglected children and unmarried mothers. It will make available for continuous use 300 beds in Chicago hospitals for free patients and will help to pay for about 70,353 visits monthly in our free and low priced clinics.

"The proportion of the fund which the child care agencies, hospitals, clinics, neighborhood work, and protective agencies will receive this year is about twice the proportion they received last year from the Joint Emergency Relief fund. The joint fund, however, cared for the unemployed as well as the usual welfare cases."

Family Relief Gets Most.

Mr. Ballard added that of the $10,500,000 raised by the Joint Emergency Relief fund last year $9,822,000 was allocated for family relief and the balance to shelters, health agencies, settlements, and protective agencies.

Although the Emergency Welfare fund is a continuation of the Joint Emergency Relief fund of last year, the chief difference is that the new welfare fund will not cover unemployment relief, but will be applied solely to the general welfare work usually supported by private charity. Unemployment relief is being left to the city, county, state and federal governments, Mr. Ballard said.

Relief Commission Problem.

Joseph L. Moss, director of the Cook county bureau of public welfare, the largest family unemployment relief agency of the Illinois Emergency Relief commission, announced yesterday that the 50 per cent reduction in orders for perishable groceries put into effect for October has increased the work of the social workers.

"We have about 110,000 families on our rolls," he said. "Since the reduction, ordered by the state commission because of the lack of funds, our workers have been hard pressed to keep up the morale of their families. The heads of families are asking them for advice on how to stretch the smaller rations to care for the whole family.

"Many families feel the reduction is an unnecessary hardship. They are very bitter. The workers in all our 27 offices are helping them, so far as it is possible, to get by this month on the reduced amount of food, but it is feared that in many instances the families will not be able to make the food orders they have received cover the whole month.

"No more money is available, however, as the state commission has allocated all of its funds on hand."

Mrs. Pearl Zubok, 20 years old, 4317 George street, was granted a divorce yesterday by Judge Walter T. Stanton in the Superior court from Edward Zubok, 1765 Sunnyside avenue, an airplane pilot. She testified she tried to help her husband while he was building a small airplane in the basement of their home, and charged that when she was unable to hand him the proper tools as quickly as he wanted them, he threw those she did give him back at her, bruising her severely. She was granted $5 a week for the support of a son, Edward Jr., 2 years old.

Dispatches from Nebraska indicate the coming winter is going to be mild. Saline county farmers point out that the corn husks are thin, although a dissenting voice comes from Lincoln where an observer remarks that the squirrels are unusually busy storing walnuts.

But the Chicago weather man thinks all such guesses are "nonsense." He does not predict the rigor or mildness of winter because he realizes he cannot judge that far in advance. F. S. Young, director of the Lincoln park zoo, also doubts that animals are weather forecasters.

"You can never tell," he said. "They grow heavy coats of fur and the birds feather early, and it turns out to be a mild winter, and vice versa. This fall they are well furred and feathered, but that doesn't mean a thing, as we have learned from long experience."

Kicked in Heart by Horse; Body Is Found in Creek

Charleston, W. Va., Oct. 7.—[Special.]—A coroner's jury today at Elkins decided that Charles Kittle, 17, whose body was found in the shallow water of Carper creek, came to his death as the result of a kick over his heart by a horse he was tending. He fell into the water and drowned.

110 CITY WATER EMPLOYES MADE UNION PLUMBERS

The Chicago Journeymen Plumbers' union last night took in as members 110 employés of the city water department who are classified as field assessors, rate takers and shutoff men. The affiliation was conducted by George Masterton, organizer of the international union in which the employés assume membership.

Besides the duties described by the titles of these employés, their work also includes daily reports on any unauthorized installations that they may find. The plumbers have contended that such inspection of the water system properly belongs to members of their union, and for this reason, according to William Curran, business representative of the Chicago local, the employés were voted membership.

The water department employés are paid less than plumbers. When asked if it was the intention of the union to raise the scale of these employés to that of the plumbers, Mr. Curran said that "no unnecessary demands would be made on the city." City officials said a demand for a raise in salary need not necessarily follow, pointing out that there are other unions in which city employés are members in which the scale is not the same for all members.

FIGHT FOR TAX CUT ON REALTY OF $100,000,000

Attorneys representing owners of 100 million dollars' worth of Cook county real estate appeared before County Judge Edmund K. Jarecki yesterday on a preliminary motion to seek a hearing of objections to the 1928, 1929, and 1930 tax levies and on a petition for the court to reduce the assessments on 300,000 properties for which objections are on file.

This action came as word was received from Springfield that the Illinois Supreme court had denied a rehearing to Mrs. Lillian Cesar, who sought to invalidate the tax rolls for the same years on the ground that real property was overtaxed by the omission of personalty from the rolls. The court, in its opinion returned three months ago, reversed Judge Jarecki's findings.

The petition filed before Judge Jarecki was supported by Attorneys Roy D. Keehn and Morris Schaeffer, representing Mrs. Cesar. With them appeared Gen. Abel Davis, chairman of the board of the Chicago Title and Trust company, and attorneys representing other large interests.

After hearing their pleas that real estate taxes are confiscatory and the answer of County Attorney Hayden Bell, who asserted that the court had no right to make blanket reductions of taxes, Judge Jarecki continued the case until Oct. 14.

REYNOLDS WILL FILED; IGNORES LIBBY HOLMAN

New York, Oct. 7.—[Special.]—A will executed by Zachary Smith Reynolds on Aug. 21, 1931, after he separated from his first wife, Anne Cannon, was filed for probate in the Surrogate's court here today. With the will was a declaration by the Guaranty Trust company, as executor, that there is no known codicil revising it after his second marriage on Nov. 29, 1931, to Libby Holman. It makes no provision for her, or an expected heir.

Five days after signing the will, Smith Reynolds sailed with a new seaplane on the Berengaria, planning to fly from London to Hangkong. He was so preoccupied with this undertaking at the age of 19, that he did not even note in a diary, to which access was granted today, that he married Libby Holman in an interval when he returned to New York to make a new start because of illness.

Weds Libby and Sails.

He went directly from the marriage ceremony at Monroe, Mich., on Nov. 29 to the liner Paris on which he sailed from New York on Dec. 1, 1931, to begin the flight and record in his diary his hopes of winning fame thereby as an aviator of ability and daring.

Four months later, when he arrived at Hongkong he cabled Libby to meet him at Honolulu.

Their marriage became public when they reached New York together last May. Two months later, Smith Reynolds was dead, leaving his second wife without any mention in a will designed to protect his estate against any claims that might arise from his first unsuccessful marriage.

The will leaves all the estimated $20,000,000 which would have come to Zachary Smith Reynolds on his twenty-eighth birthday from the estates of his father and mother to be divided equally among his two married sisters and his brother, after the payment of five specific bequests of $50,000.

Walker, Indicted, Gets $50,000.

One of the $50,000 bequests is to Albert B. Walker, his close friend, who is now under indictment at Winston-Salem, N. C., with the widow, Mrs. Libby Holman Reynolds, on a charge of murdering him on July 6. Young Reynolds died from a bullet wound in the head. The case at first was pronounced a suicide.

Two of the other $50,000 bequests are to his first wife, Anne Cannon Reynolds, and to their 2 year old child, Anne Cannon Reynolds II. In making these two bequests Smith Reynolds wrote that he had already provided $500,000 for each of them in a separation agreement, which stipulated that they release all rights to his estate and to his interest in the estates of his father and mother. This agreement was approved by the Superior court of Forsyth county, N. C., on Aug. 4, 1931.

"Nevertheless," the will continued, "it is my desire to remember my said wife and my said daughter in this last will and testament."

The former wife and infant daughter would lose this $100,000, however, if an attempt were made, unsuccessfully, to contest the will on the ground that the mother could not sign away the infant's right to inherit all of Smith-Reynolds' share, under the provision of his father's will that such share should go to any children of the heir if he died before reaching the age of 28.

Lawyers pointed out this prohibition would not apply to any action undertaken on behalf of a child of the marriage with Libby Holman, because that mariage and its possible issue are not mentioned in any of the provisions of the will.

Smith Reynolds mentioned by name in the will the major legatees, who are his two married sisters, Mrs. Henry Walker Bagley and Mrs. Charles Henry Babcock Jr., and his brother, Richard. To his brother he also gave the ring which he inherited from their father.

Aunt and Friend Benefit.

In addition to the $50,000 bequests to Walker and to the first Mrs. Reynolds and their child, he left $50,000 to his aunt, Maxie Smith Dunn, and $50,000 to John S. Graham. His seaplane was bequeathed to Henry B. Poindexter of Winston-Salem, N. C.

Although lawyers held that it might nevertheless be argued under the law of North Carolina that the children of Anne Cannon and of Libby Holman, if any, should divide the share of Zachary Smith Reynolds in the trust established for him by his father, the will declared: "It is my intention and purpose herein to dispose of all personal property of every kind which I may own at the time of my decease or which I may have the power to dispose of, under the authority given to me by the will of my father or by the will of my mother, or under the authority given to me under any other instrument."

He excluded from the will any disposition of real estate, his interest in the family home at Reynolda, N. C., being in the hands of his guardians, W. N. Reynolds and R. E. Lasater.

Pana, Ill., Oct. 7.—[Special.]—Shock caused by being struck by an automobile driven by William J. Koontz, Pana, resulted in the death last night of Mrs. Mary Jane Gage, 83, Ramsey, Ill. A coroner's jury today exonerated Koontz.

The premier has said he is willing for Tsaldaris to head a coalition government, however.

GOV. ROOSEVELT PLEDGES AID TO MINERS' CHIEFS

He Favors Limitation on Number of Pits.

BY JOHN BOETTIGER.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Albany, N. Y., Oct. 7.—[Special.]—Representatives of the United Mine Workers of America today obtained from Gov. Franklin D. Roosevelt assurance that he would work with them for a limitation of mine openings and a consequent betterment of conditions in the mining industry.

After seeing the mine workers' delegation, headed by Edward F. McGrady, chairman of the legislative committee of the American Federation of Labor, Gov. Roosevelt discussed the mine situation with newspaper men.

"The problem is one which has extended over fifteen or twenty years," said the Democratic presidential nominee. "It is clear to me that there are too many mine openings in operation and therefore the amount of employment open to those engaged in the industry gives them such a small number of hours' work per week that they just can't subsist on what they are paid.

For More Working Days.

"We must work for a limitation of the number of openings, bringing about such an increase in the number of days per week for the workers as will give them a living income.

"Of course, it follows from this that some people must be separated from the industry entirely and put into other fields of subsistence."

The governor explained that in some instances workers taken out of the mining industry had been placed on farms. In all of his planning for economic changes intended to restore prosperity the governor has proposed the shifting of workers from industries now weakened by overproduction, his idea being to strive for a balance which will provide purchasing power for all workers and bring a renewal of domestic trading.

Several Officials in Group.

In the mine workers' delegation, besides Mr. McGrady, who said he came with authority to speak for William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, were Philip Murray, vice president of the United Mine Workers; Thomas Kennedy, secretary; Henry Warrum, general counsel, and Earl Houck, Indianapolis; Frank Hughes, Pittsburgh; David McDonald, Pittsburgh, and Edward Lynch, Hazleton, Pa., the last four being district representatives.

Former United States Senator James A. Reed of Missouri conferred with Gov. Roosevelt today on the speech Mr. Reed will make at Des Moines Monday in answer to the one delivered there last Tuesday by President Hoover. Commenting on the President's speech, Senator Reed said:

Charges "False Conclusions."

"Never before were there more misrepresentation of fact and more false conclusions in a single speech. I'll deal with most of them in my speech Monday night."

Mr. Reed said his travels about the country of late have convinced him that the "big sweep" toward Roosevelt is on and cannot be stopped. Senator Burton K. Wheeler of Montana, an overnight visitor at the governor's mansion, was similarly optimistic about political conditions in the country.

Gov. Roosevelt would no comment on the nomination of Surrogate John P. O'Brien, a Tammany man, for mayor of New York, but it was learned he is pleased with the choice.

JURY COMMENDS DETECTIVE FOR KILLING OF RED

A verdict of justifiable homicide was returned yesterday by a coroner's jury at the inquest into the shooting of Joseph Sposob, 39 years old, a communist agitator, on Thursday by Detective John Touhy of the Maxwell street station. Detective Touhy testified that Sposob tried to take his revolver from him when he and his partner were dragged from their squad car by a crowd of 300 demonstrators, near the relief station at 1701 String street.

Detectives Touhy and John Fried were commended by the jury for their "cool, efficient, and courageous work" during the riot. Simon Bobko of 4227 South California avenue testified that Sposob was his cousin, was unmarried, and had no home. He said later that Sposob was a member of "unemployed council No. 1." Mrs. Mildred Chalchoff, 171 West 16th street, and Mrs. Suzanna Kozielec, 641 West 16th street, who was visiting her, testified that Sposob harrangued the mob before police arrived.

Five witnesses brought to the inquest by Thomas McKenna, secretary of the Civil Liberties union, were arrested and jailed by Supervising Captain John Stege, who declared they must have been guilty of unlawful assembly if they were witnesses. The five lived at the relief shelter at 1426 Newberry street.

SWEETHEART OF SLAIN ROBBER SEIZED IN RAID

Gary police yesterday raided the home of Alice Hiller, 24 years old, 409 Pennsylvania street, sweetheart of Ned Hills of Gary, who was shot and killed on Thursday after an attempt to rob a bank in Davenport, Ia. In Miss Hiller's room the raiders found a suitcase containing a machine gun and $1,000. The money, which included $12 in pennies, is believed to have been the loot taken in the robbery of a bank at Bradley, Ill., several weeks ago.

Miss Hiller, who apparently was unaware of the contents of the suitcase, said that Hills recently bought her a new automobile. She made no objection to the search. The police are holding her for questioning.

In another house at 4208 Maryland street, Gary, the police arrested Howard Moore, 20 years old, and seized a shotgun and shells. Moore is believed to have been a member of the Hills gang. Another alleged member, Joseph Gennaro, 3528 Adams street, Gary, is being sought.

TEXT OF HOOVER'S ADDRESS TO U.S. WOMEN

Washington, D. C., Oct. 7.—[Special.]—Herewith is the text of President Hoover's message to the women of the nation delivered by radio today:

"I am glad to have this opportunity to talk directly to the women who are organizing the support of the administration in this election. We have passed through three years of strain, of depression unprecedented in its sweep and suffering. Our people have suffered great losses. The gravity of the issues of the campaign affect women and men equally.

"When the women of America attained the vote they naturally forced certain questions into wider attention of the nation. These were questions of education, home protection, and child welfare. You are interested in even wider fields.

"I do not minimize the importance of women in the home. That is the very heart of life. But on November 8 you will be confronted with issues that will determine the future hopes of America for many years to come.

Praises Women's Foresight.

"The attainment of the vote also contributed an increased quality of idealism and spiritual purpose to all national issues. I can add that I have observed in public discussions in this campaign that women take a longer view of national life than a great many men.

"To build the home, to give a chance for better education for children and to gain a fuller life,—this is, I conceive, the dream of every American mother. Courage, and high hope, and faith builded the greatness of America yesterday. Courage, high hope, and faith, with wise action on November 8, will build a still greater America tomorrow. To achieve this purpose I am asking you to consider with me some of the problems confronting our nation.

Three Great Tasks.

"Three great tasks lie before the nation. The first of these is the battle for recovery from this depression which is now in the stage of winning counter attack on a long extended front.

"Second, we must correct economic weaknesses and wrongs which have been brought vividly to the surface in the depression. We must set up protection against recurrence of these terrible calamities for the future.

"Third, we must advance political and social organization for the accomplishment of the real purposes of life, which are security and independence of the family and the home, wider opportunity, and equal opportunity for the individual, the development of moral and spiritual equality in the nation, the strengthening of national ideals and national character. We must upbuild the moral leadership of America in the world.

"The election on Nov. 8 is of deep seriousness in its consequences to this future. It will not only determine whether proven measures now winning this battle against depression shall be exchanged for unknown experiments but it will determine the course to be pursued by the nation for many years to come in the solution and advancement of these great questions.

Future of America.

The women will be voting not alone on one issue but on all these issues. Twenty years from now, thirty years from now, and a century from now there will be an America. What sort of an America concerns you at this critical moment?

"In immediate matters of the depression men and women are equally affected. But on you, the women, falls the full anxiety of the direct effect of the impact of burdens upon the home. Moreover, some ten millions of you are engaged in gainful employment, so that employment not only presses indirectly but it also presses directly upon you through loss of your jobs.

"In thousands of homes you have had to undertake the whole responsibility as the only bread winner. You are gallantly carrying that burden. It is certain that if it were not for your earnings the depression would have brought greater suffering to a multitude of families. Whatever the different burdens of men and women may be, recovery from the depression is the same for both.

"The forces moving against our people from outside our borders proved to be beyond the control of a single individual or a single institution. In such emergencies the government, which must represent the whole people, has been faced with one or two alternatives.

Emergency Program Necessary.

"The first, to do nothing, which would have meant degeneration over a score of years, with dangers to every one of you and to our very national life. That I refused to accept. The second was for the government to adopt an unprecedented emergency program fitted to the battle as the forces developed against us, but holding absolutely to proven principles, preserving the safety of American ideals, and the future of American life.

"This course we have taken. The emergency measures now in action represent an unparalleled use of national power to relieve distress, to hold jobs, and make more jobs, to serve agriculture, to preserve the stability of our institutions, and maintain the integrity of our government.

"And they include not only the official powers of the government. I have used every influence of the presidential office to mobilize and organize the whole community in cooperative action in attack to overcome the depression in a score of directions which can be attained through the combined initiative of individuals and communities.

"Our policies in protective tariff have saved our people during this depression from enormous increased unemployment of labor; they have saved our farmers from even lower prices due to competitive products from abroad because of the breakdown in living standards and currencies in foreign countries.

Policies of Opponents.

"Our opponents would loosen these destructive forces upon us. Our policy of practical stoppage of immigration has saved the loss of hundreds of thousands of jobs during this period of stress. Our opponents have given no indication of their intentions upon this question.

"In our emergency governmental measures we have adhered to the principle of bringing government aid to our people through already existing institutions. We have confined it to those institutions definitely affected with public interest, not to save their owners—although they, too, represent millions of our people and should have our concern—but for the final purpose of protecting the whole people in holding their homes, their farms from loss through debt, to protect their savings deposited in banks, their insurance policies, to promote their employment. We have won that safety for them and for you.

"The measures and weapons we have set up to break the depression may appear to the eye as cold, mechanical things. If they are analyzed, however, in their ultimate result they are effective and human things. They have real hearts behind the mechanism designed to create precious human blessings as their product.

Savings Wiped Out.

"Many of you have seen the savings of a family's lifetime, slowly accrued to secure comfort and independence in old age, swept away by the failure of the bank where they were kept. You have seen foreclosure of mortgages on farms and homes at your own towns, not from lack of security, but from the inability of institutions to renew mortgages because of the demands upon them.

"Records of thousands of such pitiful incidents have passed over my desk and have deeply touched my sympathies. But sympathy alone does not save lives and property when the house is burning. Fire engines, hose, and axes have to be brought. They, too, are cold and mechanical contrivances, but they are the only effective instruments of human helpfulness, which is eager to protect and save. It has been my duty, in this emergency, to devise such mechanical but effective instruments to save homes and jobs.

"Governmental institutions in a democracy move slowly, but the work of one of these agencies can be well illustrated by the fact that in the two and a half months between my recommendation to congress for the creation of the reconstruction corporation and the time it was actually enacted into law and established, the net bank failures, measured in terms of deposits, were about $499,700,000.

Bank Failures Decreased.

"In the two and a half months following the establishment of the corporation the bank failures decreased to $29,400,000, or by 94 per cent. In the last two and a half months banks which have reopened have, in terms of deposits, actually exceeded deposits in closed banks by $15,600,000.

"This represents the protection of literally millions of families from the despair of loss of their savings, protection to millions of others from being crowded to the wall of bankruptcy through demands for payment of their debts which they could not meet without the sacrifice of everything they possessed.

"This pledging of national credit has saved thousands of our benevolent trusts and the endowments of our great educational institutions upon which the future development of our national life greatly depends.

Home Loan Banks.

"As a further instance of the great instrumentalities we have brought to bear in this great battle I would cite you not only the reconstruction corporation but also the newly established system of home loan banks which function through the great mutual thrift institutions of America, the building and loan associations, savings banks, and insurance companies, all of which hold mortgages on over five million different homes.

"This mechanism by pooling the lending resources of the nation will obtain for them the supply of credit which will bring to an end the tragedies of foreclosures and reopen opportunity for men and women to acquire homes, while destroying nothing of the individuality and character of these institutions. We have also strengthened the mortgage institutions upon which farmers are dependent. We shall strengthen them further.

"It is the organized women who can interpret the working of these agencies in their human results to the individual and to the family.

Principle of American Life.

"Throughout these measures we have insisted upon maintaining the fundamental principle of American life, that we should not use the government to destroy or replace the functioning, the enterprise, or responsibility of individuals or institutions. We are aiding them across an emergency. We will withdraw these agencies except the home loan banks when the battle is won. We will leave the initiative and the enterprise and the courage of our people unimpaired.

"The home loan banks not only serve an emergency but they are also continuous permanent institutions which will provide the machinery through which it will be more easy in the early years of their married life for men and women through their combined effort to acquire homes in which to rear their children and to retain that home for comfort and security in their old age.

"I desire that you should study and compare the whole program that we have set during the past three years for meeting and overcoming the depression with the proposals of our opponents. The program of their party has had its only true expression in the measures which they introduced or passed through the house of representatives, which was fully controlled by the Democratic organization during the past session.

Cites Specific Measures.

"I would ask you to ponder carefully upon the Collier bill, passed on Jan. 9; upon the Gasque bill, passed on March 4; upon the Goldsborough bill, passed on May 2; upon the treatment they accorded to the recommendations of the administration for economy in the bill passed on May 3; upon the Garner-Rainey bill, introduced on June 3; upon the Patman bill, passed on June 15; upon the Rainey bill, passed on July 7.

"These measures would have put a burden of $3,500,000,000 upon the country. They would have created enormous issues of fiat money. They would have destroyed the effectiveness of the tariff commission. They would have led us to place the fate of American workers and American farmers in the hands of foreigners through placing our tariff subject to foreign determination.

"They would have put the government into wholesale personal banking. They would have broken down every safeguard that we have established to prevent pork barrel legislation. Had we not been able to stop these measures they would have destroyed recovery; they would have thrown us from the foundations of 150 years of careful upbuilding.

Correction of Weaknesses.

"Passing from the immediate battle against depression, the second great series of constructive measures before us which I have mentioned are those which will be necessary to correct abuses and weaknesses in some of our economic machinery which has been so vividly exposed during this depression.

"You are well aware that for 40 years, and in some cases 100 years, the federal and state governments have regulated the insurance companies, savings banks, and other financial institutions. They have also regulated the railways, the electrical, gas and other public utilities. All these agencies have been fully accepted in American life as having a public and human interest beyond the sole question of their right to competitive profits.

"As a result of weaknesses which have developed we must have constructive revision of these regulations in a form that will not destroy but will give greater service and greater security to the whole people.

"The spirit in which we must develop these remedies and reforms is the preservation of initiative of our people; that we should punish and prevent wrongdoing, not that we should destroy them by our government foisting great bureaucracies upon the country which only deaden and do not heal. We must not lose faith in the ability of democracy to be master of its own house without burning it down because some men have proved unfaithful to their trusts.

Direct Importance to Women.

"These are all things of direct importance to women, for they involve the long view of holding open equality of opportunity for the future of our boys and girls. I have presented such measures to a Democratic house without response from them except speeches in this campaign.

"Another of our great problems is the safeguards which we should erect against recurrence of such calamities.

"This is a primary necessity to the future of the nation. We cannot as a people run the risk of having our whole civilization degenerate by such recurrences. There is a fundamental source of prevention which has been too much overlooked in this campaign. No one will deny the fact that such a depression would never have taken place had it not been for the destructive forces loosened by the great war.

Prevention of War.

"If we are to assure that our country shall not be wracked and endangered by such calamities as we have gone through in the past few years, the first measure for safety is that we should have peace in the world. We have therefore a vital part to play in the setting up of machinery and in striving to replace war and force with peaceful settlement of controversies between nations.

"We properly refuse to entangle ourselves in age old controversies in other parts of the world. Our face is turned forward, not backward. I have taken the position that we will not participate in trying to compel people to engage in settlement of controversies by the use of force.

"The Kellogg pact, which was established largely by my eminent predecessor, has been advanced by this administration to a point now accepted by the world as of far greater potency than was even contemplated at the time of its inauguration. Under the policies we have advanced we have definitely secured that the public opinion of the world will be mobilized and concentrated against those who violate that pact.

"We have advanced the further doctrine that the world should not recognize the benefits that any nation may obtain by its violation. By these new concepts we advance the settlement of controversies by peaceable means and we keep the United States free from the dangers of war. They are the true expression of moral leadership of the United States.

Reduction of Armaments.

"In order further to attain these safeguards against war I have initiated a vital plan for the reduction of armaments throughout the world. By the acceptance of these proposals the world will be relieved of an enormous burden of taxes which in the last analysis are paid by the laboring men and women whether in the home, at the shop or at the desk. I have proposed methods of disarmament which would make it harder for one nation to attack another and easier for one nation to defend itself from aggression of another.

"And thus we build up a sense of security amongst nations. We reduce the fears and apprehensions and hates which in themselves lead to constant instability in the world and ultimately to the dangers of war.

"And another, and not the least amongst the many questions of the long view of the future and those which the enfranchisement of women have advanced to public understanding and insistent action, is the question involving development of education, the protection of children, the upbuilding of home life and its security. Men approach these questions also, but you approach them instinctively with a surety of judgment.

Women Accept Leadership.

"Two years ago, when I began to organize the White House conference on child health and protection and to find in the country those individuals who could take up the hard drudgery of committee work, to determine facts and draw conclusions from them, I found that the great majority fitted for that work of leadership, by skill and experience, were the women.

"Again, when I organized the conference on home ownership and home building, it was necessary to create similar research committees to present conclusions to the conference. Again the skill and spirit was found largely among the women.

"Both these conferences brought high results in the advancement of public thought. They are already ringing through our national life in concrete public action.

"The nation is faced with many other grave problems, many of which reach the very foundations and hopes of America for the future. I know from experience the power of women to help decisively in the solution of such great national problems through their capacity for definite organization and support of unselfish and patriotic causes.

"Today I would ask the women of America to study deeply the issues before the nation. Upon your actions rests a large measure of the responsibility for the future of our country. Upon those of you who are taking an active part in the work of the Republican party in this campaign falls a major share of responsibility that the issues be clearly understood.

Asks Active Support.

"I ask every woman everywhere who believes in our cause to join actively in it from today to the election. I not only express my very deep appreciation of your fine and unselfish efforts, but my confident hope that your continued efforts will gain a final success next month.

"Turning from these questions I should like to express a further thought. We are emerging from this depression. We shall continue if our constructive policies are maintained. One of the greatest things that might come from this three years of depression would be a realignment of public thought about the realities of living. And if we do get that out of it, the depression will yet be worth all it has cost.

"In the last few years our purpose has been largely to pile up money. We have revelled in huge figures with dollar signs before them, in the fascination of enormous numbers. We have been fond in these times of talking about our tremendous losses in terms of these dollar signs.

"We have not paused to reflect that these dollar signs represent only our homes, our churches, our schools, and the great tools of our factories, our farms and our railways, whose only purpose is to serve the home and the purpose of living itself.

True Purpose of Living.

"The true purpose of living is to find a continuing expansion of the powers of body and mind, a noble outlet for the exercise of these powers, to place ourselves in tune with the purpose of an admighty providence. The proper aim of education is growth. The proper aim of money making and saving is to assure us from bondage to fear for our daily bread so that we may have time and means to enlarge our knowledge, to give a more generous response to the promptings of the spirit.

"The proper aim of our government is to preserve equality of opportunity, to hold open the door of opportunity that there may be an expression of the creative power of our people by rewards distributed on the basis of service and effort. Our economic life should be viewed in this philosophy as a means to a high and worthy end.

"Good government is the gift of good people to themselves for the fountain of social justice cannot rise higher than its source. The times call for a soul-searching reëxamination of our national purpose in life. We shall call in vain on others to be patriotic if our own patriotism has failed. We shall demand good government in vain if we neglect our own duties in the precinct and at the polls."

of you who are taking an active part in the work of the Republican party in this campaign falls a major share of responsibility that the issues be clearly understood."

In appealing for the women's votes the President outlined his position on several of the major issues of the campaign, openly attacked the Democratic leadership, sounded an appeal for action which would make future depressions impossible, and traced in detail the reconstruction program now in operation. The President said the nation is emerging from the depression, adding that the depression would have been worth all it cost if it "brought about a realignment of public thought about the realities of living."

Great Tasks Confront U. S.

The President said that today three great tasks confronted the nation. He listed the first of these as the battle for recovery from the depression "which is now in the stage of winning counter attack on a large extended front." The second task called for the correction of "economic weaknesses and wrongs brought vividly to the surface in the depression."

"As a third task," said Mr. Hoover, "we must advance political and social organization for the accomplishment of the real purposes of life, which are security and independence of the family and the home, wider opportunity, and equal opportunity for the individual," and the upbuilding of moral leadership.

State to Hear All Six Convention Leaders.

Chicago and Illinois Democrats rejoiced yesterday that party harmony is to be demonstrated unmistakably between now and Nov. 8 by the platform appearance within the state of all six men who were mentioned as real presidential possibilities before the Chicago convention.

Those six are Alfred E. Smith, Newton D. Baker, Gov. Albert C. Ritchie, Melvin A. Traylor, United States Senator James Hamilton Lewis, and Gov. Roosevelt himself.

The arrangements for the Smith and Baker speeches are still tentative, neither time nor place having been designated; but Gov. Ritchie's dates have been listed definitely. He will appear at the Patten gymnasium, Northwestern university campus at Evanston, on Monday, Oct. 17, and two meetings are to be arranged for the following day, one in the stockyards district, the other somewhere on the west side.

MAURICE L. ROTHSCHILD

MINNEAPOLIS State at Jackson CHICAGO ST. PAUL

G. O. P. VICTORY MARCH IS ON, SANDERS SAYS

Hoover's Speech Winning Midwest, He Asserts.

In the face of adverse polls and other indications that this is a "Democratic year," Everett Sanders, chairman of the Republican national committee, whose early party training was under President Coolidge and who has been considered by some as about as uncommunicative as his preceptor, issued a statement yesterday that was full of optimism.

"The campaign this week," it read, "became a Republican victory march. As the first week of October draws to a close assurances of Republican success on Nov. 8 appears in every quarter.

Aided by Hoover Speech.

"President Hoover's fighting speech at Des Moines, we find, has resulted in two definite reactions. First, our reports from every middlewest agricultural state indicate that the President's clear statements of what he has accomplished and what he proposes to do in the way of helping agriculture and to whip the depression form a concrete program far more acceptable to the voters than the visionary and hazy promises of Gov. Roosevelt and his lieutenants.

"Second, the fearless, smashing attack of the President instilled a morale in congressional, state and local Republican campaign organizations that makes them unbeatable in the coming weeks.

Named on Finance Board.

Republican headquarters in the Palmer house also announced that two important additions to the financial organization for the campaign had been made. They were the additions of Charles S. Dewey, former assistant secretary of the treasury and financial advisor to Poland in the post war days, and James D. Cunningham, former president of the Illinois Manufacturers' association, as vice-chairman of the Illinois committee on finances headed by Silas H. Strawn.

Mr. Dewey will have charge of the trade and industry group and Mr. Cunningham will direct all the state work outside of Chicago.

Other business leaders enlisted in the Hoover campaign include A. I. Appleton, Henry Dawes, Charles D. Boyles, Louis E. Leverone, M. H. Pontius, Walter Ross, Paul Scultze Jr., Frank Warren, Robert D. Lay, Homer Lange, C. John Whipple, Hayes MacFarland, and G. F. Slaughter.

Additional announcements from Republican headquarters included the appointment of Mrs. Henry [Niana Converse] Davis of Springfield, Ill., a practical dirt farmer, to direct campaign efforts among the farm women of the state. They also disclosed the contribution of $1,000 from Mrs. Robert Todd Lincoln and a check for $500 from her daughter, Mrs. Charles Isham.

Hurley Is Confident.

A quiet confidence that the tide of sentiment is swinging rapidly towards President Hoover for re-election was expressed by Secretary of War Patrick J. Hurley yesterday, when he arrived in Chicago after a speaking tour through middle western states. The secretary of war stopped at the Palmer House last night where he conferred with local Republican leaders. He will journey today to Ripon, Wis., where he will deliver an address tonight.

"Iowa, of course, may be expected to be in favor of Mr. Hoover because he is a native Iowan," commented the secretary. "But discounting that, there still remains a noticeable amount of enthusiasm for the President which seems to be growing. His recent Iowa speech aroused the people to a realization that if they want clear and definite statements they must turn away from the Democratic candidate and listen to the President.

"There was a favorable reaction to the President's speech of acceptance. There was a great change in feeling after the Iowa speech. And Mr. Roosevelt's western tour, marked by a series of vague and shadowy lectures, has done much to help the Republican cause.

COURT PROBES REDUCED CHARGE IN TRAFFIC CASE

Judge William E. Helander of the Traffic court opened an investigation yesterday to determine if a charge of reckless driving against George Downs, alleged beer hoodlum, should have been driving while intoxicated.

William Burke is the complainant against Downs. He said his arm was crushed on Sept. 2 at Ada and 74th streets when Downs drove into his stalled automobile. He asserted he asked Englewood police to book the hoodlum for driving while drunk. Police instead, he said, made the reckless driving charge. As a result of Burke's complaint Judge Helander continued the case to Oct. 25 and ordered Desk Sergeant John Fogarty, who booked Downs, into court.

Sergt. Fogarty explained last night that Downs "was not noticeably intoxicated." He booked him for reckless driving, he said, because that charge "virtually covered everything."

500 Attend Republican Radio Party for Women

More than 500 women representing every ward in Chicago attended a radio party of Republican women yesterday in the red lacquer room of the Palmer House. Mrs. Bertha Baur, national Republican committeewoman, presided. After listening to President Hoover's radio speech broadcast to women over a national hookup, the meeting took on the nature of a revival, with precinct workers testifying to the harmony in their wards.

10 FARM WOMEN COMING HERE FOR G.O.P. CONFERENCE

Leaving their households to their husbands, ten farm women from different middle western states set out for Chicago yesterday to try their hand in mixing the political pie at the Republican national headquarters today. They will attend an all day conference at the Palmer house under the direction of Mrs. T. L. Smith, head of the farm women's section of the women's division.

The women have studied the political situation in their own counties and will aid in mapping campaign plans to help the Hoover-Curtis ticket.

Fish Company Manager Robbed on Way to Bank

Arthur Schaffner, manager of the Lakeside Fish and Oyster company, 657 Fulton street, was on the way to a bank yesterday afternoon when two armed men forced the car in which he was riding to the curb at Halsted and Fulton streets. There they took $600 and checks for $1,500 from him. The robbery was reported to the Des Plaines street police.

Former I. C. C. Employe, Out of Job, Hangs Himself

John W. Diamond, 46 years old, an accountant formerly employed by the interstate commerce commission, hanged himself in his home at 7929 Merrill avenue yesterday. His widow told police that he was laid off in August and that he had since been despondent. He also is survived by three children.

LABOR PARTY OF BRITAIN OUTLAWS MR. MACDONALD

Snowden, J. H. Thomas Are Also Disowned.

BY JOHN STEELE.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, Oct. 7.—The Labor party, conferring at Leicester today, completely disowned Prime Minister MacDonald and Dominions Secretary J. H. Thomas, who remain in the cabinet, and Viscount Snowden, former lord privy seal, who resigned last week. The resolution forbade the return of any former Labor party members who had joined or supported the national government, which was formed last fall.

Another resolution directed the Labor members in parliament to continue unrelenting opposition to the protective tariff policy. Today's actions closely follow the declaration last week of George Lansbury, recognized Labor leader in parliament, that the national cabinet has been Tory [Conservative] from the beginning.

The Labor meeting also adopted a resolution demanding abolition of the house of lords as "dangerous and unnecessary," and wound up by singing the "Red Flag."

Conversion Saves 150 Millions.

A gross saving of 150 million dollars yearly will result from the recent conversion of the 5 per cent war loan. Chancellor of the Exchequer Neville Chamberlain quoted this official figure at the Conservative party conference at Blackpool today.

He also announced that another big conversion scheme will be undertaken as soon as is opportune in accordance with the terms of the loans.

Admitting that the terrific burden of taxation is one of the major factors retarding recovery of trade in Britain, Chamberlain declared that the government intended to secure further economies, particularly in local and public expenditure. Although the unemployment problem gave him great anxiety, the chancellor said he had every reason to believe that other economies could be achieved.

Third of Income for Taxes.

The fact was revealed during conference discussions that $5 out of every $15 earned by people of the country went to the state in taxation. One delegate, quoting Lord Snowden's figures, said that of the national income of about 15 billion dollars in 1931, the state took a net by taxation of 3,880 millions, and in the present year the figures would be much the same. In 1906 the state was spending only one-thirteenth of the national income.

The chancellor's speech had its reaction on the stock market today, when British government securities showed a substantial rise.

Asks Tax on Russian Goods.

"Such goods," he said, "never could have been dumped at depreciated prices but for the conditions of labor which prevail nowhere in Europe outside of soviet Russia."

The Conservative convention loudly voiced approval of this stand. This matches up with the demand the dominions made on Britain at the Ottawa conference to bar soviet products. Locker-Hampson advocated a special tax on Russian imports.

Demands End of Credits.

"Britain should certainly cease giving any more credits to Russia, as money advanced is going to be used to build up the cause of revolution," he declared. "Russia has the greatest army in the world and the greatest factories for the manufacture of lethal gas. If we have any money to spend let us spend it at home. Or, if we have enough at home, let us spend it on the dominions."

He ended with a tirade demanding a firm stand of British policy against the demands of India and the Irish Free State.

Wins $35,000 for Loss of Leg

Given by Jury

Virginia Meyer, 13 years old, 5211 University avenue, yesterday was awarded a verdict of $35,000 against the Railway Express Agency by a jury in the court of Federal Judge John P. Barnes. The girl's right leg had to be amputated as a result of injuries incurred when she was struck on Oct. 4, 1928, by an express truck. She is the daughter of Ben F. Meyer, a stock broker.

Indicted for Murder of Sheriff on Liquor Raid

Rushville, Ind., Oct. 7.—[Special.]—An indictment for first degree murder was placed against James W. Webster today by the Rush county grand jury in connection with the slaying of Ray Compton, sheriff, at Webster's home in a liquor raid Monday. Webster is at large. Anna Mae Webster, 18 year old wife of the alleged murderer, was ordered held as a material witness. Her bond was set at $25,000.

Merchant's Daughter Sues Gary Athlete for Divorce

Mrs. Lucille Kos, daughter of a wealthy Gary merchant, was granted a divorce yesterday by Judge Roy Green of Hammond, Ind., from her husband, Peter Kos, former Gary High school athlete. She charged cruelty and testified that after she had spent $5,000 in 11 months on her husband he beat her and refused to work. Mrs. Kos' father, L. Goodman, is the owner of a department store.

LIVES SAVED BY FREE LUNCHES, SAYS PRINCIPAL

Clay School Head Pleads for Her Pupils.

BY KATHERINE KELLEY.

The empty benches and bare tables in the lunchroom of Clay school, 13231 Burley avenue, are a bleak reminder for Mrs. Abby McCulloch, principal, that many of her pupils are hungry. The children ask hopefully every day when the free lunches are to start again.

"They ask their teachers, but their teachers haven't the heart to tell them we have no money to feed them this year," Mrs. McCulloch said yesterday. "THE TRIBUNE Hungry School Children's fund, with the aid of teachers and friends, gave 200 of them a hot, nourishing meal each day last winter.

Says Fund Saved Lives.

"There is no doubt in my mind but that the fund saved the lives of many of our pupils. We have noted improvement in children fed by the fund last winter, both in their work and general health. If these lunches could continue, the good work of last winter would not be undone."

An example of hunger in Clay school is the case of James, a plucky lad who didn't want to admit that he needed food.

"One day last week James said he wanted to go home because he felt he was going to faint," Mrs. McCulloch said. "He wouldn't admit he was hungry, but when we asked him what he had had to eat the day before, he said all he had had was cornmeal. We then asked him what he had eaten for breakfast and he told us it had been a little bread and coffee."

Direct Gifts to 2 Schools.

The contributions received yesterday, which totaled $428.70 and sent the total in the fund well over the $1,000 mark, were hailed with joy not only by the Hungry School Children's fund but also by the Foster and Seward schools. So many of the contributions were designated for those two schools that Miss Frances L. Swain, head of the household arts department of the board of education, announced immediately upon hearing the news that she would send money to start free lunches there.

Yesterday's gifts were headed by a $100 contribution from Robert J. Folonie. Among those who pledged weekly or monthly gifts were Elizabeth Stein, the M. T. club, and Mrs. G. Branch. A $2.50 gift came from Mrs. Ben Smith, in honor of the 75th birthday of her aunt, Mrs. Fannie Kramer, which is tomorrow.

"She is truly deserving of a happy birthday because she is so kind and thoughtful of others. In thinking what to give her it dawned upon me how happy she would be to know that, through her, some hungry school children will be fed," wrote Mrs. Smith.

League Goes on Record Against Press Censorship

BY JAY ALLEN.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

GENEVA, Oct. 7.—Just when energetic attempts were being made on several fronts to give international dignity to government censorships, convictions that the press should be kept free and untrammeled were voiced overwhelmingly today in the assembly of the league of nations.

The assembly had met to consider the results of a study made on an old request from Spain as to the possible collaboration of the press in the organization of peace. Most government schemes for this imply some kind of a gag. But the results of inquiries made among national and international press organizations showed what Viscount Cecil of Chelwood said this morning:

"There is a practically universal dislike on the part of all responsible journalists to any increase of government control of the press."

Delegates' Comments Lively.

"The best remedy for all false and tendencious views is the fullest and freest supply of news," Lord Cecil said.

But the highlights of the session were the lively comments of delegates who happen to be journalists.

One of them, François d'Etessan, French deputy and editor of Dépêche de Toulouse, said that the false news, which the European governments already practicing the strongest censorship are most preoccupied with, is more likely to come from government press bureaus than journalists. He pointed out that false news had not yet been defined and that the whole matter is "very fluid, delicate, and ephemeral."

The other, Doña Isabel de Palencia, Spanish journalist and feminist member of that republic's delegation, said flatly that journalists could not do their work properly if hampered by governmental control. She suggested that Spain might call a world conference on the freedom of the press.

"Silence on important matters," she said, "brings fear. This leads to misunderstanding and, finally, to hate."

Lord Cecil pointed out the discrepancy between the cost of production of a newspaper and its sales price, a gap which he said had been bridged by revenues from advertisers, if not actual ownership by special interests. The latter, he said, results in the danger of influence.

Like the other speakers, he drew heavily on the report made to the assembly by Clarence Streit, president of the International Association of Journalists and accredited league correspondent of the New York Times, especially for suggestions on reducing the gap in question by lower duties on newsprint and lower telegraphic and radio rates. Lord Cecil suggested that the league's wireless be put at the disposition of the correspondents here.

"The great thing to do is to foster the health and growth of journalism and to enable journalists to work with greater freedom and recognize journalism as an art," he said.

Publicity Insisted Upon.

Publicity of all league sessions generally is insisted upon and very little was said in favor of such disguised proposals of a vast international censorship such as the Polish moral disarmament project.

(Poland proposed restrictive measures on the press, motion pictures, and other agencies of public information at the disarmament conference last June.)

It is interesting to note that the communications congress, now going on at Madrid, at the moment is considering the requests of several governments for an increase in censorship powers, as defined by international telegraphic regulations. The United States sent a special delegate to Madrid to fight these requests. He is Robert T. Pell, press attaché of the Paris embassy.

BY ARTHUR SEARS HENNING.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Los Angeles, Cal., Oct. 7.—[Special.]—Save by the most optimistic Hoover partisans, California, the President's home state, is placed in the doubtful list today. Its 22 electoral votes may go to Hoover by a comparatively small margin or to Roosevelt by a plurality of landslide proportions, such is the political chaos that obtains in this region.

Republican National Committeeman Mark L. Requa freely admits it is a tough fight, but thinks the President will pull out with not less than 150,000 votes to spare over his rival compared with Hoover's 550,000 plurality in 1928 and Coolidge's 200,000 majority over Davis and La Follette combined in 1924, when the situation more nearly resembled that of today.

John B. Elliott, who is in charge of the Democratic canvass, looks for a Roosevelt victory, perhaps by no great margin, and wouldn't be surprised if the California electoral vote were to be divided, as it was in 1896 and 1912, and within 1,100 votes of a division in 1916.

A bird's-eye view of political conditions in the state presents a bewildering picture. The Republican party is in a disorganized state, due in part to the political ineptitude of the President, according to some of his critics, and in part to the insurgency of the Hiram Johnson faction. The Johnsonites are backing Roosevelt this time.

The Democratic party had become attenuated and disorganized by long years of wandering in the wilderness and has only recently been galvanized into new life by visions of the fleshpots not unconnected with promising aspect of the Roosevelt candidacy. Democrats by the thousands who had been voting in the Republican primaries for years scrambled back into their own party in the two primaries this year in preparation for plumping for Roosevelt next month.

For the Aug. 30 primaries 1,453,000 Republicans and 1,000,913 Democrats registered, as well as 125,000 who declined to state their party affiliations. For the Democrats this was a 21 per cent increase over the registration for the May primaries and 129 per cent over 1930. For the Republicans it was a 7 per cent increase over May and a 5 per cent decrease from 1930.

Democratic Vote Declines.

In the May primaries the Republicans cast 657,000 and the Democrats 539,000 votes. In August the Republican vote rose to 850,000, while the Democratic declined to 513,000.

The Republican managers see safety in the fact that there are 450,000 more Republicans than Democrats registered. The Democratic leaders point out that the Republican registration includes the Johnsonites, who are off their party reservation so far as the national ticket is concerned. What with such Republican defections and accretions from the 125,000 who indicate no party affiliations, the Democrats calculate a Roosevelt plurality.

Most of the Republican leaders concede that Roosevelt will carry wet San Francisco and probably all of North California, which is Johnson's stronghold, and that the election will be decided by the vote of Los Angeles county, which is normally Republican and in which 1,230,000 are registered for the November election. Of this number the registered Republicans exceed the Democrats by 150,000.

Out to Knife McAdoo.

The Democrats are far from united, but the indications are that the lack of unity will manifest itself almost exclusively in the knifing of William G. McAdoo, Democratic candidate for senator. The Al Smith Democrats, 117,000 of whom voted for Justus Wardell, wet, opponent of McAdoo in the August primary, will vote very largely for Taliant Tubbs, the repealist Republican candidate for senator.

Resentment of the Ku Klux Klan affiliations of McAdoo in the 1924 convention flamed anew in the breasts of the Smith followers, most of whom are Roman Catholics, when McAdoo, aided by Hearst, delivered the California and Texas delegates to Roosevelt in the Chicago convention and thereby checkmated Al. McAdoo thus avenged 1924, but may have wrought his own undoing as a candidate in this election.

While the Smith Democrats have no use for McAdoo and little more for Roosevelt they hate Hoover most cordially because of his identification, in their minds at least, with the stirring of religious bigotry against their hero in 1928.

Will Plump for Roosevelt.

Little as they like Roosevelt, they will plump for him to avenge 1928. What with Johnsonites bolting Hoover and Smith Democrats bolting McAdoo, the favorite ticket in wet San Francisco has become Roosevelt and Tubbs.

McAdoo, a dry who opposed the repeal plank in the Chicago convention, has indorsed the platform and committed himself to repeal of the eighteenth amendment too explicitly to please Democratic prohibitionists and not with sufficient enthusiasm to satisfy the wringing wet Democrats. Hence he appears fated to lose the votes of the wets to Tubbs and the drys to the Rev. Bob Shuler, Prohibition party candidate for senator.

The general impression, even among Democratic leaders, is that McAdoo is doomed to defeat. And in the Republican camp there is little more confidence in the election of Tubbs, who, while he will gain the votes of an enormous number of wet Democrats, will lose those of a probably greater number of dry Republicans to Shuler.

A significantly large number of Republican and Democratic managers confess to misgivings that Shuler is going to be elected. Shuler was nominated in the Prohibition party primary, but under the provisions of the California law he also was enabled to run in the Republican primary, in which he polled 198,619 votes, and in the Democratic primary, which gave him 86,259. He appears destined to receive not only these votes but also a goodly proportion of the drys supporting Senator Shortridge, who polled 206,450 votes in the Republican primary, and almost all of the 187,999 voting for Joe Crail, who, like Shuler, was bone dry and for immediate payment of the veterans' bonus.

Shuler is a Methodist preacher who out-Heflins Heflin. His broadcasting station was shut off the air because of the character of his diatribes against prominent Californians. Now, broadcasting on purchased time, he is compelled to observe conventional decencies while asking, in vindication of free speech, election to the forum in which utterances may not be questioned.

The Republican campaign, just getting under way, is stressing the Hoover depression relief program and the protective tariff, under which, it is claimed, California growers of citrus fruits, walnuts, and beans have prospered greatly.

HORNER SPEAKS TO STUDENT BODY AT U. OF ILLINOIS

BY PERCY WOOD.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Champaign, Ill., Oct. 7.—[Special.]—Judge Henry Horner's Democratic campaign for governor of Illinois brought him before a new kind of audience today—to an auditorium packed with University of Illinois students, across this city's boundary in the college town of Urbana.

For their benefit Mr. Horner deviated, momentarily, from a straight political course and talked of education and the university's relation to the commonwealth, but for his evening crowd in Champaign he reverted once more to the issues of the campaign.

Pledges Coöperation.

Judge Horner envisions part of the university's province as that of "a laboratory for the state, not a mere scholastic monastery," but he was quick to add, and this to applause, that "nothing could be more inimical to the purposes of the university than to permit it to be buffeted about in the maelstrom of party politics."

Another declaration of the Horner attitude toward the university was that "it is not my intention to curtail any department but enable the radiation of all departments."

He will deem it a great privilege, the candidate said, "to sit down with the board of trustees—the governor being an ex-officio member—and aid in the solution of the university's problems, being ever conscious of the independence from state political domination of those charged with the conduct of education.

"The governor and the general assembly must encourage the university as a vital help to the state and in many cases as an aid to the administration. It shall be my purpose to encourage creative work among the students as well as research work of the kind which would help the state in agriculture and taxation."

During the course of his Urbana speech, Judge Horner paid high tribute to and praised the administration of Harry Woodburn Chase, president of the university.

Rips into Opponent.

For the first time since he took to the downstate field in his stumping tour, Judge Horner's path crossed that of his opponent, Len Small, today. Small spoke in Champaign this afternoon, then rushed on to other towns. Judge Horner spoke in Monticello at noon, Urbana in the afternoon and here tonight. Thus, the candidates did not meet.

There was a connection between the two meetings, however. Small charged that the Democrats had depleted the treasuries of the state and of Chicago each time they were in power. A warm denial was Judge Horner's prmopt response. The facts, he said, were that Small raised the coats of state government 300 per cent during his first term in office, and Small's manager, a former Republican mayor of Chicago, depleted the city treasury of a sizeable balance during his last term, adding a debt on which the municipality is now paying $1,000,000 interest monthly.

Mayor Cermak, said the judge, "has given Chicago a highly efficient administration and has reduced our running expenses $20,000,000 annually."

ROBINS' WIFE TELLS DRY CHIEF SHE IS SURE HE HAS BEEN KIDNAPED

Washington, D. C., Oct. 7.—(AP)—The wife of Raymond Robins, who disappeared Sept. 3 and for whom a nation-wide search has been made, today told prohibition bureau officials she was convinced her husband had been abducted by bootleggers.

Mrs. Robins, who is in Washington as a guest at the White House, conferred for two hours with Amos W. W. Woodcock, chief of the prohibition bureau.

She later said she was returning to the White House for a talk with President Hoover.

Woodcock said Mrs. Robins had given them no additional information about the disappearance of her husband and that they had been unable to furnish her with any clews.

Robins disappeared after he checked out of the City club in New York and left a Washington hotel as his forwarding address. He had an engagement with President Hoover on Tuesday, Sept. 6, which he failed to keep.

Wife Charges Father Sold Her for $200 as a Bride

Mrs. Valsamo Panagiotaros, 5006 Irving Park boulevard, charged yesterday in a divorce hearing before Superior Judge Joseph Sabath that in 1911 her father sold her for $200 as a bride to her husband, Chris. She was 15 years old at the time. Judge Sabath set a hearing on the divorce plea, which Panagiotaros is contesting, for Nov. 1.

CANNON WRITES BOTH CANDIDATES ON PROHIBITION

Washington, D. C., Oct. 7.—(AP)—Bishop James Cannon Jr. and four other southern Methodist leaders have written open letters to President Hoover and Gov. Roosevelt asking what specific plans they have for preventing return of the saloon and for protecting dry states.

President Hoover was asked whether if reëlected he would recommend modification of the Volstead act, and whether he would sign or veto any Volstead modification congress might pass on its own initiative.

The letter to Gov. Roosevelt asked whether he did not think the Volstead modification indorsed by the Democratic platform would "greatly increase the difficulties of effective prohibition enforcement" without satisfying those opposed to prohibition.

IF TAIL GOES WITH HIDE, SHINE GOES WITH SHOES

Joseph Campbell, 43 years old, 6054 Prairie avenue, was arraigned in the Wabash avenue court yesterday on a charge of stealing six pairs of shoes. He explained that he really hadn't stolen the shoes and the only reason he took them was because they adhered to the polish he had put on them at the request of Clarence Powell, merchant at 5901 Prairie avenue.

"He promised to pay me two bits to shine those shoes," declared the defendant. "When they were all shiny he wouldn't pay. Well, my polish was on the shoes, so I took it back. I couldn't help it if the shoes had to come with the shine."

Judge Leon Edelman dismissed the charge when Campbell promised to return the shoes and Powell agreed to pay the 25 cents due.

CONVICT DEATH CHAIN IS SHOWN TO FLORIDA JURY

Detective Says He Found It in "Sweatbox."

Jacksonville, Fla., Oct. 7.—(AP)—Stories of stark brutality in the Sunbeam prison camp and of guards roaring with laughter at a convict's agony were related today in the trial of two former camp officials charged with murdering Arthur Maillefert by slow torture in the sweat box.

E. L. Smith, a fellow prisoner of the youth from Westfield, N. J., who robbed a filling station and was sent up for nine years, testified Maillefert was placed in a barrel as punishment for trying to escape. Both ends were knocked out and it was hung over his shoulders by means of straps and planks.

They placed him in the sweat box, barrel and all, the convict said, and the youth spent the night in the narrow, upright confinement that Florida law provides for unruly convicts.

Tumbles Out on Ground.

Next morning, however, they let him out, Smith related, and Maillefert tumbled out on the ground. He was naked save for the barrel, which rolled around, and he had difficulty in arising.

The convict said that struck Capt. George Courson, one of the defendants, as comical, and he and several guards laughed uproariously. He made no mention of Solomon Higginbotham, the other defendant.

Smith testified Maillefert's body bore the marks of a whipping, although Florida law prohibits use of the lash in prison camps. He said he helped prepare the body for burial and found "large bruises all over his legs, arms, and back where they had whipped him."

Detective Tells His Story.

County Detective W. H. Gasque related how he demanded to learn details of Maillefert's death, after a justice of the peace had held no inquest would be necessary.

Gasque, who led the investigation that resulted in the indictment of George W. Courson and Solomon Higginbotham, the defendants, said a deputy sheriff called him and reported the death.

"Gasque said he presented himself to Courson, who was acting captain at the camp, and was told that "Judge Youngsblood," justice of the peace, had said no inquest would be necessary.

Demands to See Dead Youth.

The detective then said he demanded to see the body and was allowed to do so. He said several convicts were called into the office and they told him "how good Capt. Courson had been to Maillefert."

Gasque said he went walking in the prison camp yard. He came across the stocks which were on Maillefert's feet when he died.

"I asked Capt. Courson if he had those on his feet?" said Gasque. "He replied, 'Yes'."

I then went into the sweat box and found that chain, continued Gasque, indicating the chain on the court room floor.

Victim Unruly Convict.

"I asked if he had died with that around his neck."

"Courson said 'Yes,' after hesitating several seconds."

Gasque said Courson then related that Maillefert had been an unruly prisoner "determined to escape and I was determined for him not to escape."

The next day, Gasque said, he returned to the camp. Courson wouldn't let me inside the stockade while I had my gun," he said, "he turned the gun over to the captain."

"I went inside and asked a group of prisoners if they knew anything about the case.

James H. Travis, convict from Dade county, said he had measured the "sweat box" in which Maillefert died and found it less than the regulation 3 feet square. He said the box was dark when Maillefert was placed in it.

HUNT EMPLOYE OF BOND HOUSE FOR $50,000 SHORTAGE

Henry Brod, 46 years old, formerly office manager for a mortgage bond concern in the loop, has been sought by the police since Aug. 31, when a shortage of between $50,000 and $80,000 was discovered in his accounts. The search for Brod was disclosed yesterday.

Henry P. Kransz, 29 South La Salle street, who was Brod's employer, said he had been a faithful and trusted employé for twenty years. It is believed that Brod accepted money paid in by customers of the firm and then covered his peculations by juggling the books.

In an effort to serve a warrant charging larceny by bailee, Sergts. John Geary and Ralph McKenna went to the fugitive's home at 3823 North Oakley avenue. Mrs. Brod said that her husband had left the city and that she was in want and had not heard from him. He is believed to have lost heavily in the stock market. Kransz said any losses were covered by Brod's bond.

3 ARE BURNED TO DEATH WHEN AUTO TURNS OVER

Columbus, O., Oct. 7.—(AP)—Three persons were burned to death tonight when their automobile burst into flames after it skidded into a telephone pole and overturned a mile west of the city.

The victims were Robert Wark, 24; Mrs. Florence Wark, 23, and A. L. Bradshaw, 47, all of Columbus.

Mrs. Clara Kerr, 50, was pulled from the burning car by Delmar Robison, who witnessed the accident. She suffered minor cuts and bruises.

Robison and another man attempted to rescue the others, who were trapped in the car, but were held back by the flames.

WOMAN SENTENCED

Mrs. Sophie Paul, 56 years old, was sentenced yesterday by Judge Michael Feinberg to serve one to ten years in the women's penitentiary at Dwight, Ill., on a charge of larceny. She was found guilty by a jury two weeks ago of the theft of $18,000 from her former employer, Harry C. Wirsing, 76 years old, 134 Main street, Evanston.

Wirsing testified that Mrs. Paul, his former housekeeper, had taken $66,000 in cash and securities from his safe deposit box. Attorney W. W. O'Brien, representing Mrs. Paul, was granted a stay of mittimus until Oct. 28, to perfect an appeal to the Supreme court.

PRISONERS TELL OF HORRORS IN RUSSIAN JAILS

to the G. P. U. prison in Zytomir and thence to the Kharkov prison. In March of the same year I was brought to trial with eleven other priests and 21 Poles. The court consisted of members of the G. P. U. and we were refused counsel. Twenty-seven of the accused have been condemned to death and the sentence was carried out. I was sentenced to ten years at hard labor in a prison camp in Kotlas, near Archangel.

"The guards, composed of members of the communist party expelled to Kotlas for criminal offenses, are especially inhuman. I was imprisoned with 680 criminals known as 'szpana.' These are children who left their homes in search of food and live by petty larceny. I was a victim of this gang, too.

Priest's Shoes Stolen.

"My scant belongings were stolen. They took my shoes and I was forced to go barefooted until I made a pair of wooden shoes.

"We had to rise each morning at 5 o'clock. Even ailing prisoners had to get up. Otherwise they would be beaten. Many could hardly stand on their feet on account of 'cynga'—disease contracted through hunger.

"One day I was told that I was to be exchanged for a communist and set free. Happy as I am, I cannot forget the thousands of other imprisoned priests in Russia."

Czeslaw Fedorowicz, another priest, who was incarcerated on Solowki island, declared that the mother of the Russian metropolit [head of the church] had informed him of cannibalism among starving Russian peasants and that children had been the victims.

"One egg costs $2.50 in the Ukraine," the priest said. "One loaf of stale bread, weighing two pounds, sells for $4. A shirt is priced at $25."

Hands Broken By Guards.

The only priest, who wore a church robe under his shirt, was Francis Andruszkiewicz. He said he had been in prison for five years and that both of his hands had been broken by G. P. U. agents.

Sergt. Ludwik Szmidt, formerly a member of the Polish frontier guards, was another released prisoner. He is 26 years old and his hair is snow white. This is the story he told:

"I was patrolling the frontier near Stolbce when Soviet guards crossed the line and seized me.

"A mock trial was held at Minsk. I was accused of crossing the frontier to 'organize an insurrection against the Soviet.' I was sentenced to death This sentence was later commuted to life imprisonment in Siberia. With other prisoners I was conveyed in an old freight car, with no windows and no exit. Men, women and children were literally piled on top of one another for six days and six nights. Any requests for better food were answered with the butt of a rifle. We reached Komizeran and had to work on the construction of a railroad from Uscivim to Uchta.

No Shoes in Winter.

"It was in the dead of winter. We had no adequate clothing, no shoes, no heat when we returned from work and no food. In summer there was suffocating heat. Guards enjoyed themselves by tying a naked prisoner to a tree near the swamps to watch how long he could stand the mosquitoes.

"Eighteen trees had to be cut and cleaned daily by men and women, young or old. In desperation, prisoners inflicted themselves with wounds in order to go to the camp hospital where there is one doctor for 20,000 persons. There is no medicine and there are no instruments."

BOOKS

New Faulkner Writing Fits His Material

Book Is Without Form, but Keeps on Its Toes.

BY FANNY BUTCHER.

"Light in August," by William Faulkner. [Smith-Haas.] Published on Thursday.

NOW and again there are seismic disturbances in the surface of our literary world, which goes on usually in its calm, fruitful way, bearing the seed planted in it by the past, accepted as a final fact by the present.

WILLIAM FAULKNER.

The most spectacular "trembler" of the last few years has been a young man named William Faulkner. His first writing was characterized by a violence of material, an absence of any of the old fashioned forms in technique, and mannerisms of style which were so marked that they cried to be, and were, caricatured.

One of the most intricate of intellectual literary games is the pinning on of the donkey's tail, as it were. Give the guessers extracts of the works of classic or contemporaneous authors and let them figure out who wrote them. Incidentally there is exactly such a contest in this month's Book Dial, with prizes for the most accurate guesses and a short essay on "The Store," by T. S. Stribling. One of the most amazing things, even to some one who reads continuously, as a literary editor must, is that almost all writing sounds alike. You might have a hard time telling from the style whether Thomas Babington Macaulay, Gen. Pershing, or Georges Clemenceau had written a piece about an historic occasion. In the Book Dial contest there is only one excerpt which—if you hadn't read the books and didn't know what they were about—you could label accurately just from the style, Ernest Hemingway's.

William Faulkner has had the distinction of writing always so much like himself and like no one else that any one could spot his work—the description of an eye "like the upturned underbody of a dead fish" or words to that effect, and the running together of two or three words to express an idea, like "in the soft light downfalling upon the soft ungirdled presence of a woman prepared for sleep" for instance.

Such mannerisms are the most easily caricatured imaginable, and Mr. Faulkner was simply a lush hunting ground for the wits. On the other hand, Arnold Bennett's criticism of him will overbalance the caricatures, for about no one else living, so far as I know, did Arnold Bennett declare that "he writes like an angel."

It is too bad that Mr. Bennett did not live to see. "Light in August" for Mr. Faulkner's most glaring idiosyncrasies in writing have been shuffled off of his pen and there remains a style which, while just as peculiarly the author's own, has a solidness and a rightness that his previous writing had only part of the time. He has achieved something, not different for the sake of difference in "Light in August," but a style which exactly interprets the mood and the matter of the book.

The mood is that of reality vibrant with brooding menace—not so much that of horror as in his earlier books were. The matter is the crisscrossed lives of people far from the norm, a white man with enough of the black in him to drive him to maladjustments as an orphan child, aimless wandering, casual loves and finally to murder, a ne'er-do-well who has run away as the book opens from the girl who loves him and as the book closes has made his escape from her again; a white woman who loves the whole black race and dies for her love, a preacher who has stubbornly lived in the town a lifetime after being driven from his church and blood whipped by the K. K. K.

Even the characters who flit in and out of the action are all a little mad one way or another. Even the calm, fruitful Lena, who opens the book as she has tramped a month in search of her lover that their child may be born in wedlock, and who closes it, still tramping, with her three weeks old baby, in search of its father. And the simple Byron Bunch, who was an honest, God fearing and God serving man.

The book is without form in the conventional sense. It hops about on its toes, but the point is that it is on its toes all the time, never slumped into inactivity.

I should say that "Light in August" would make William Faulkner's popularity with the cognoscenti more understandable to the ordinary reader while in no sense disappointing his admirers.

"Nymph Errant" Is Funny Story of Young Girl

"Nymph Errant," by James Laver. [Knopf.]

SINCLAIR LEWIS pats "Nymph Errant" on the back in this fashion: "'Nymph Errant' is Mr. Theodore Dreiser's 'Jennie Gerhardt,' as it would be retold by Mr. Evelyn Waugh. It is 'Pilgrim's Progress' narrated by Miss Margaret Kennedy. It is the adventures of a Beggar Maid with a whole series of twentieth century Cophetuas, the several episodes composed by Mr. Aldous Huxley, Mr. Joseph Hergesheimer, Dr. Magnus Hirschfield, the author of the Cunard round the world advertising, and Miss Dorothy Parker. . . ."

Young and beautiful Evangeline Edwards, just fresh and starched out of a finishing school, gleaming with innocence and purity, boards the train for Dieppe, where she will embark for England. On the train she meets a wealthy Frenchman whose proposals and plans are too irresistible for Evangeline.

She now embarks on a career that is as complete surprise to her as it is to the reader. She leaves town suddenly with a Russian musician who takes her to Paris. After a few months of this her fancy is taken by a German who wants to join a nudist colony. She trails along, but finds that the principles of nudism are not the principles of Evangeline Edwards. With that thought and the consequent decision she meets up with an elderly nobleman from Austria, where she goes to occupy a rather dilapidated castle.

Thence to Venice, where her nobleman sells her off to a Greek merchant. She gets involved in a war and is shipped to Turkey. Here she is ensconced in a harem until a bright young American youth rescues her. Back to Paris she goes, if not chastened, nevertheless somewhat subdued.

The excellence of the narrative, the cynical and riotously funny attitude of the author, never diminish. A book like this, with its mastery of the chosen artistic form, is a boon to the reader who knows a brilliant and funny book when he sees one.

Famed Love Story of Orient Is Used in Harold Lamb Book

Harold Lamb, author of "Tamberlane," has chosen the immortal love story of the orient for the subject of "Nur Mahal" [Doubleday-Doran]. The love of Nur Mahal and Jahangir can be compared to the love of Abelard and Heloise, and Tristan and Iseult. Though this love is famous in the annals of oriental literature, this book for the first time brings the story to the English reader.

Nur Mahal, a beautiful, low born Persian girl, met the young Jahangir, but was banished from the kingdom by the Emperor Abkar. The two lovers did not meet again until Jahangir was middle aged, debauched by wine and women, cruel and despotic. But Nur Mahal in her deep love for him rescued him from his corrupting life and through this love kept his body and mind alive while she ruled the empire for him. The tale is vivid and fascinating, written with a deep and keen appreciation of the culture of the east and a literary style that makes the book as irresistible as it is scholarly.

Two First Novels Deal with Educational Affairs

Two young Chicagoans have just published their first novels, each dealing with the supposedly inside workings of two educational institutions. "Probationer," by Mary Denny Phillips [Godwin], tells in the first person a young girl's experiences while in training for a nurse in a large general hospital. "Star's Road," by Lloyd Stern [Vanguard], pictures the life of a paid football player in a large co-educational university.

English Output of 'Own Stories' Shows Advance

Figures of Real Importance Pen Biographies.

BY FRANK SWINNERTON.

LONDON.—[Special Correspondence.]—The general standard of autobiographies is rising. We are no longer being given books by nonentities who have scraped together a few names of celebrated people and been content to record these names and a number of trivial incidents in their own lives. Able writers, whose sense of character and the history of their own time is very keen, are being persuaded to set down what they remember. One such man, E. V. Lucas, has very nearly ready the story of his life and friendships; another, Sir Henry Newbolt, is to publish this year the first volume of his "Memoirs."

E. V. LUCAS.

Now Sir Henry is not only a poet of great repute and wide popularity; he has also been a man of affairs in the political world. His interests are exceptionally wide and humane. A lawyer, a true patriot, and a man of remarkable social charm, he has seen as much of the intellectual and political history of England as anybody could wish during the last fifty years.

Sir Henry has united shrewdness with romantic feeling, and perception with courtesy; and as a poet he has been quite outstandingly sensitive to the spirit of the time in which he has lived so fully and wisely. His "Memoirs" ought to possess unusual value, grace, and delightfulness.

Another book to the publication of which I am looking forward is Roy Campbell's study of Robert Burns. I do not know what "line" this book will take, but Mr. Campbell, although a South African by birth, is Scottish by descent; and he has one of the boldest and least querulous minds among the young poets of our day. His serious poems are devoutly "collected"; his most amusing and brilliant skit upon English literary figures and cliques, "The Georgiad," has been greeted with disapproval by all official critics and with delight by all skirmishers and detached observers of the literary scene; and a work of his in prose will have both the charm of novelty and the guarantee of original opinion.

What Mr. Campbell says, he means; and as Burns is always a storm center there is no doubt at all that what Mr. Campbell says about him will lead to controversy. The result should be entertaining and stimulating.

An excellent biographer is turning his mind to genuine fiction. Raymond W. Postgate, who wrote so recently a Life of Robert Emmett which was universally praised [as it well deserved to be], is now to appear as the author of a novel called "Felix." Felix has been the name of previous heroes of fiction, notably of Floyd Dell's "Moon Calf," and that in itself is a fact of happy omen.

But when it is added that Mr. Postgate has expressed the hope that he has written "a cheerful story of hearty enjoyments and simple and sharp sorrows, ending in death," readers may anticipate a book full of life, of Fleet street [which is its scene], food, drink, love, and other agreeable sensations.

"Felix" should make many friends, as the author of his being has done in the course of an active and useful life.

Elswyth Thane Pens Study of Early Life of Queen Elizabeth

Elswyth Thane, the wife of William Beebe and the author of five successful novels, has written in "The Tudor Wench" [Brewer Warren and Putnam], an entrancing life of Queen Elizabeth. Few people realize how dramatic a life this famous queen of England had. She lived to be seventy years old and ruled for forty-five years. During that time she squeezed into her life adventures and experiences that most people would not have had in six lives.

But even before her coronation Elizabeth had lived a crowded and thrilling life. It is of these first twenty-five years that the author is concerned. She presents and analyzes the turbulent youth of this girl whose life turned out to be as significant as it was erratic. The book closes with the coronation of the twenty-five year old queen. The biography itself, written in the modern manner, stimulating, vital, and imaginative, is based on the most carefully examined and assimilated facts from records at the tir of Elizabeth and up to the present.

Strange Tale of Insanity Is Book of Power

"Man Made Angry" Has Bloody Revenge.

"Man Made Angry," by Hugh Brooke [Long & Smith].

"MAN MADE ANGRY" is one of the strangest tales that has come our way for some time. Even if the whole story were told, the reader would receive but a slight impression of the power of the book, for its success lies for the most part in the author's treatment and method.

Clovis Dell is a young provincial who has come to London with a little cash and a small income left him by his father, who kept a butcher shop. Clovis, no longer his father's assistant in the shop, feels he can indulge himself in his passion, writing poetry. He tries time after time to get some sort of footing in literary London and finally becomes editor of an advance guard magazine which he attempts to support on his private income.

Clovis Dell is a very insignificant looking man. Not tall, slender, with pale eyes, weak chin, a nondescript face in general, extremely shy and idealistic, he succeeds in arousing nothing but contempt and a mean sort of pity in all those whom he wishes to impress. He falls madly in love with an adventuress who laughs at him and makes use of him mercilessly. He is slowly driven within himself, becomes abnormally sensitive and wishes for only one thing from life. That one prayer is that he may r himself in some way or other talked about.

The way he accomplishes his purpose is one of the most ghastly short cuts to success that you can possibly imagine. Clovis Dell is a man made angry, made angry by cuts and insults, by the contempt and ridicule of his associates, and by the inappreciation of the world. His revenge is complete and bloody.

The author of this unusual record of insanity approaches his material with wicked satire and a biting cynicism. Occasionally the author lapses into writing that is reminiscent of Edgar Allan Poe and consequently makes the contrast of his humor, his dry, unemotional narrative even more effective. This is a book that eludes description or classification, but it is remarkable and you won't forget it.

NEW YORK G. O. P. HUNTS NOMINEE FOR MAYOR'S JOB

Talks of President Butler and Two Generals.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Oct. 7.—[Special.]—George U. Harvey, borough president of Queens, has declared he would not be a candidate for a special mayoralty nomination at the city-wide convention of Republican county committeemen tomorrow night. That left G. O. P. leaders today the task of finding a man ready to accept that indorsement.

Among the possibilities are mentioned Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler, president of Columbia university, and Maj. Gen. John F. O'Ryan, wartime commander of the Twenty-seventh division. The nominee will face Surrogate John Patrick O'Brien, unanimously nominated by Tammany at last night's Democratic convention.

Another G. O. P. possibility as a candidate, it was said, is Maj. Gen. James G. Harbord, while the committee of 1,000 is expected to furnish Samuel S. Koenig, New York county leader, with a list of men whom it would support.

Macy Mentions McKee.

W. Kingsland Macy, Republican state chairman, met with the county leaders during the day, later issuing a formal statement that he found considerable sentiment for Acting Mayor Joseph V. McKee, the man Tammany ignored last night.

McKee announced late today that he would not run independently. He congratulated Surrogate O'Brien.

O'Brien today intimated that he believes the costs of New York City government no higher than proper and city salaries perhaps a little lower than they should be.

O'Brien Gives His Views.

"The cost of government of New York City is not peculiar to this city only. In comparison to the nation, the state and to other cities, I find it very favorable," he said.

"I grew up with city employés. I've seen them slave all their lives for the city of New York. I've seen them die in harness. At this point I want to praise those loyal city servants whose emoluments were never adequate to their service to the city and the people who reside here.

"The city employés were threatened with a pay cut first by Mayor Walker and then by Acting Mayor McKee."

O'Brien added: "I will make every effort to bring about economy. The burdens of taxation are enormous. On one hand we have the public crying for improvements such as tunnels, bridges and so forth. All must be given consideration in view of public demand, but with regard to financial aspects also."

Six Inches of Snow Falls in Tennessee Mountains

Storm Kills Farmer.

Albany, N. Y., Oct. 7.—(AP)—One of the worst rainstorms in many years had passed on beyond New York state today, leaving in its wake broken bridges and blocked highways. Robert E. Wylie, 39, a farmer, lost his life in the rushing water which swirled down from Catskill mountains. The rainfall ranged from nearly two inches in western New York to more than six inches in parts of the Adirondacks and Catskills.

Davis, 2413 Payne street, Evanston, and Mrs. Harold Anderson of Calgary, Alta., sisters, who have not met in the last twenty-five years, are to hold a reunion in the Davis home next Sunday. The sisters become separated when they left an orphanage. They were then Margaret and Louise Heuck and were 3 and 4 years old respectively. Margaret was adopted by an Evanston family and Louise by a family in Sterling, Ill., who moved later to Canada. They were not able to communicate with each other until last week.

Oysters Cling to Lost Spectacles in River Bed

St. Michaels, Md., Oct. 7.—(AP)—Dipping into Miles river near here, George H. Barnes, inspector for the state conservation department, found a pair of horn rimmed spectacles—lost two years ago.

The time the glasses have laid in the water was determined by Swepson Earle, state conservation commissioner, by three oysters clinging to the lenses.

It was the first time, he said, he had known of oysters with glasses, but a longer once found several oysters clinging to a pair of false teeth.

GUARD SCHOOLS AFTER ATTEMPT TO BOMB TROOPS

Kidnaping Threats in Illinois Mine Row.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Canton, Ill., Oct. 7.—[Special.]—Two school buildings were placed under guard here this afternoon when reports were circulated that an attempt would be made to bomb them. Seventy-five National Guardsmen were posted around the junior high school and the McCall grammar school, where more than 1,000 students were attending classes.

The reports followed the attempted bombing of troop headquarters this morning as a protest against the entrance of the state militia into the mine area. A sentry on duty at the Pythian temple where the troops are quartered, found a lighted bomb under a window ledge at the rear of the building. He extinguished the fuse. The bomb was ten inches long, wrapped in black tape, and six inches of the fuse remained when it was discovered.

Many Threats Received.

Mine operators and working miners have received many threats by telephone recently that their children would be kidnaped unless troops were withdrawn from the coal fields of Fulton county. The threats were directed against the operators of mines at the reduced wage scale and against miners working for the new wage.

Indications today were that the Drake mine, one of the largest in the county, and one of three which have always been operated by union workers, will be in operation Monday. Should this mine start, much of the tension will be relieved, according to officials.

More Mines to Reopen.

Edwardsville, Ill., Oct. 7.—[Special.]—More than fifty mines in St. Clair and Madison counties will resume operation immediately under a $5 basic wage scale, it was announced today. Coal mine operators of the mines began signing agreements to this effect with the Progressive Miners' union.

More than 5,000 miners will be put back to work as a result, it was said. C. G. Stiehl, president of the Operators' association, said the operators are satisfied with the wage scale, which is the same as that approved a few months ago by the United Mine Workers.

Stiehl and Claud Percy, president of the Progressive union, in a joint statement, declared: "We will bend our efforts to see that the coal industry is put on a stable basis and that Illinois gets its just share of the coal business."

Rob Cashier of $3,000; 40 in Office Undisturbed

COOLIDGE ANSWERS ALL QUESTIONS, USING EXACTLY NINE WORDS

Troy, N. Y., Oct. 7.—(AP)—Four newspapermen found a slender, serious faced passenger in a parlor car here yesterday afternoon, staring soberly out of a rainswept car window.

"Good afternoon, Mr. Coolidge," said a reporter.

Calvin Coolidge roused and smiled faintly. Passengers all around, who had not recognized the former President, sat up.

"Will you tell us where you are going, Mr. Coolidge?"

"New York."

"Will you say what you intend to do?"

"I'm going to a railroad meeting."

"Have you anything to say on the political situation?"

"No."

"Will you shake hands with a good Republican?" Morris asked.

MEXICO ORDERS CHURCH SEIZED IN TIA JUANA

TIA JUANA, Mexico, Oct. 7.—(AP)—Father Jose Nunez said tonight that an attempt had been made by officers of the federal court to serve him with a court order commanding that the Church of Our Lady of Guadalupe be turned over to the government.

Father Nunez said he refused service of the papers, telling the officers that several months ago he had deeded the Catholic church, the only one in Tia Juana, to a committee of members of the parish. He said the officers left in search of the committeemen.

The order, Father Nunez said, declared the church was to be transformed into a "mercantile building." He added that he understood the department of the interior planned to use it as a postoffice.

Police Quiz Archbishop.

MEXICO CITY, Oct. 8 [Saturday].—(AP)—Archbishop Pascual Diaz of Mexico left police headquarters at 1:40 a. m. today after having been there for about two hours, during which he was questioned by police. He said he was completely at liberty as he left.

Members of the chamber of deputies yesterday declared the archbishop had violated the religious law of the state by saying mass and performing other duties of his office without having been properly registered. His arrest was demanded by several of the deputies.

Girl, 15, Kills Self; Puts Blame on Education

New York, Oct. 7.—[Special.]—Arleigh Vall, 15 year old high school girl, committed suicide by inhaling gas in her home in Brooklyn today. She left a note, in which she wrote: "Tell Aunt May and the teachers that this is what education has done for me."

FARMERS TO AID HUNT FOR MILK PLANT BOMBERS

Call Massmeeting at Elkhorn Tonight.

Dairy farmers of southern Wisconsin and northern Illinois, enraged at the bombing of the new $30,000 Burlington farmers' milk plant early Thursday morning, were prepared to form a vigilante organization last night to help authorities hunt down the perpetrators. They have called a massmeeting at Elkhorn this evening.

Officers of the Pure Milk association in Chicago, sales agency for the 160 farmers who were deprived of a market by the destruction of the dairy, announced the supply was being processed and shipped to Chicago yesterday without further loss to the farmers. No shortage in the city supply was caused by the dumping of four tons of milk Thursday, they said.

Two detectives from Chicago were following clews left by the five masked men who set off two charges of dynamite in the plant. Racine county authorities and the Burlington police announced that a small black valise containing 107 half pound sticks of dynamite and three caps had been found in the plant ruins.

In addition to this evidence two empty dynamite boxes, found within 20 feet of fuse in a culvert on highway 36, seven miles south of Burlington, were being examined by police. The identification numbers had been removed from the boxes, but fingerprints were being taken.

Wreckers were at work on the demolished plant yesterday, clearing away the debris. It was understood by Burlington farmers that they would have a new plant ready to handle their milk in three weeks, according to plans of the contractor.

Governor's Son to Prison for Violating Banking Laws

Albuquerque, N. M., Oct. 7.—(AP)—Gov. and Mrs. Arthur Seligman were at the railroad station here today to say farewell to their son, Otis, as he left with six other former employés of the First National bank of Santa Fe for Leavenworth federal prison. The seven were convicted of conspiracy to violate the national banking laws. The governor's son was sentenced to five years and fined $1,000.

Great Quantities of Gold Discovered in Labrador

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

HARBOR GRACE, Newfoundland, Oct. 7.—W. J. Walsh, minister of mines, today confirmed rumors that gold has been found in Laborador, Newfoundland's continental colony. Walsh admitted that gold had been discovered in considerable quantities and said he anticipated a big rush in the spring. Navigation now is tied up for the winter.

ST. CHARLES FARM MEETING COOL TO 'HOLIDAY' MOVE

Land Owners Are Scarce Among 150 Present.

BY PAUL POTTER.

A none too enthusiastic meeting of Kane and Kendall county farmers was held in the high school auditorium at St. Charles last night to hear further discussions of the National Farm Holiday association. The meeting was held under the auspices of the Farmers league, affiliated with the Holiday movement, and was called by Harry Cochran of Aurora.

About 150 persons attended. Not more than thirty were said to be land owners. Probably thirty or forty others were renters; the others were described as hired hands, onlookers or downstate farmers interested as jobholders of the Holiday association. It was said that there was some disappointment over not having attracted more of the substantial farmers to the meeting. Those who attended listened to a two hour speech by E. E. Kennedy of Kankakee, field agent for Milo Reno of Iowa, head of the Holiday organization.

Mr. Kennedy urged the farmers to withhold their products from market "as a protest against the control of financial matters by international bankers." Some of the farmers walked out before he concluded his talk.

Near the end of the meeting a vote was called on the question of holding meetings in all townships Monday night for the purpose of withholding products from markets. There was no negative votes cast, but of the 100 or more apparently entitled to vote only twenty-five voted affirmatively.

ARREST KEYMAN IN A $14,000,000 TRUST COLLAPSE

Boston, Mass., Oct. 7.—[Special.]—Paul R. Tibbetts, arrested in New York today, was characterized tonight by Assistant Attorney General Louis Sawyer as the last link needed to complete the state's case and assure the immediate trial of 11 men on conspiracy, larceny, and other indictments growing out of the $14,000,000 collapse of the New England Investors Shares, Inc., formerly doing business as the New England Investment Trust.

Fifteen persons, including bankers, several lawyers, and a woman, were indicted originally in 1931 following an investigation by the attorney, but until the arrest of Tibbetts the state had no way of "tying in" the officers of the company with the alleged fraudulent transactions.

Tibbetts was described by Sawyer as the sales agent for the defunct trust, which has been bankrupt since 1929, and the man who handled the firm's circularization of prospective clients.

"The newspaper is an institution developed by modern civilization to present the news of the day, to foster commerce and industry, to inform and mold public opinion, and to furnish that check upon government which no constitution has ever been able to provide."

HIGHWAYS AS PORK.

Congressman Holaday of Danville has an ambitious plan for a national highway system to be built at federal expense. He would have the government build or take over seven transcontinental roads and fifteen or sixteen roads from Canada to the southern border with a maze of interconnecting highways. A supporter of the project comments:

"We in Vermilion county have long felt that the United States should adopt a definite system of direct, connected national highways, to be built and maintained by the government along the general lines which proved so successful in giving Illinois the greatest system of paved roads in the United States. . . . This plan would also remove your objection that politics and local self-interest defeat the true purposes of federal aid."

It may be assumed that the plan is not put forward with a view to filling the pork barrel; but no one familiar with congressional practices can doubt that this measure, if adopted, would have precisely the result of providing congressional pork in such quantities as this country has hitherto never experienced even in time of war. Every congressman would be demanding roads for his district without stint or limit and, under color of national road planning, would be getting them. The adoption of this proposal could be expected to result in unprecedented levies upon the taxpayers, and the expenditures, if persisted in, would destroy the treasury's credit in a few years. Billions of dollars would be required to finance the scheme.

If any proof of these forecasts were required, it is found in the letter previously quoted. Illinois, our correspondent says, "has the greatest system of paved roads in the United States" thanks to the fact that the state some years ago ceased to aid the counties in road construction and took over the task of road construction and maintenance on its own account. By analogy he argues that if the United States took over road building from the states a similarly beneficent result would be attained.

If "we in Vermilion county" will take the trouble some pleasant Sunday to drive into Chicago a somewhat different judgment on the Illinois highway system might be reached. If the Illinois system is, indeed, "the best in the United States," the others must be grievously inadequate. A Sunday afternoon drive would demonstrate the truth that, though nearly half of the motor traffic in Illinois is to be found in the northeastern corner of the state, only a pitifully small proportion of the highway funds of Illinois has been spent in the congested corner. For all practical purposes, a Chinese wall has been erected around precisely that part of Illinois to which and from which most of the road users wish to travel. Illinois may have more miles of hard roads in proportion to its area or population than any other state, but to say that it also has an adequate road system is to overlook the meaning of the word system. We have roads but no system.

If there is anything to our correspondent's analogy, what might be expected if the federal government superseded the states as the supreme highway authority is easily forecast. The unneeded transcontinental highways would be completed at enormous cost while the construction of adequate terminal roads in the congested centers would be allowed to wait. Depending upon which party happened to be in power, the Republican or the Democratic states would get the lion's share of favors.

There is only one sound principle to follow in planning a road system and that is to provide the facilities demanded by traffic density. The Holaday plan will work in a different direction. It will provide roads as political expediency demands them. If a bureaucracy at Springfield has bungled the job of planning an adequate highway system for Illinois, what can be expected of a bureaucracy in Washington even more securely insulated from the people who want to use the roads?

HENRICUS ASIATICUS AS NO. 1 BOY.

"Dr. Sze has been appointed acting minister for China in the U. S. A. Which is another thing hay fever sufferers should avoid. If they even try to pronounce him it will just start 'em right off again."—R. H. L. in the Line.

But no; the possibilities exceed that. They make for brighter uses in diplomatic pourparler which our own Mr. Stimson may find more congenial as being of his native vernacular. Henricus Asiaticus may begin to get somewhere, as follows: Mr. Stimson to Count Uchida, Japanese foreign minister, subject of conversation, Manchuria: "Scram." Count Uchida to Mr. Stimson: "O, yeah!" Mr. Stimson to Count Uchida: "Yeah, mugg, scram." Count Uchida to Mr. Stimson: "Sez who?" Mr. Stimson to Count Uchida: "Sez I and Sze." Dr. Sze to Count Uchida: "Sez I."

After that what's a war or two?

THE LEAGUE AND THE BOYS IN THE BACK ROOM.

Various comments in Europe reveal that Lord Lytton's report on Manchuria for the league of nations is not to be taken as an expression of conscience having the confidence of the major nations whose representatives dominate the council at Geneva. The observations upon the committee findings and recommendations are not official, but they are credited with inspiration. Again, as often before, when the league or one of its commissions has appeared as keeper of the European conscience it has not been able to produce the great seals of authority.

Italian comment on the report, appearing in a Naples paper of considerable authority for Italian policy, sympathizes with the population pressure in a strong nation confronted with the moralities of the league of nations. Italy merely takes one eye off Africa to look at Asia. Mr. Stimson in our state department can take both eyes off Nicaragua, Haiti, the Philippines, etc., not to mention the American southwest, and fasten his gaze on Manchuria. If he sees the brick coming he'll l in luck.

It may be a semi-honest sentiment which causes the governments of Europe to blow cold on the league when it shows signs of getting hot. The league, although it is set up by the act of these nations and contains their accredited representatives, is a thing with nothing more material than a roof and a secretariat. It has no history and its constituent nations have. They are sitting on possessions acquired in the very fashion the league's principles condemn. The league as a unit separated from the sources of its supposed authority can act without the embarrassment of its prior acts, but when the authority gets back home to the individual nations the explanations begin.

When Mr. Stimson proposes as an added clause to the Kellogg treaty that no territory acquired by force shall be recognized he merely proposes that everything done to date shall be recognized as good, valid, and moral, including the recent rearrangement of territory in Europe itself, but that the game is off for the future. The landlords who have all they covet get their title clear; the dispossessed, the hard pushed, the pioneers, and squatters are told that they cannot get title at all.

Such a blanket validation of everything which has been done and prohibition of everything similar to it in the future does not fit in with any scheme of human action which has been known to date. The satisfied landlord may try to make it an inviolable rule, but even he does not know his own future and he'll change his opinion when his desires change. Mr. Stimson might think it very strange if he found Cuba libre on his doorstep some morning.

FOR CHILDREN.

Monday is the authorized Tag day of the Children's Benefit league, which represents fifty charities for children, all indorsed by the Association of Commerce. This was the first regular Tag day established in Chicago—23 years ago—and there is no question that never in the life of the community has there been such great need for the work for children performed by these charities. All charitable work is in a real crisis at this time when demands before it have increased while funds have decreased. The Children's Tag day gives special opportunity for many individuals who are not or cannot be regular supporters of philanthropical institutions to make some contribution to a service which no humane community will neglect. Contributors may be confident not only that their donations are greatly needed but that they will be well spent.

Editorial of the Day

A STRAIN ON CREDULITY.

[Bloomington Pantagraph.]

When former Gov. Len Small hinted to his Mackinaw Dells audience last Friday that if Judge Henry Horner is elected governor he will proceed to collect some three hundred odd millions of dollars from downstate property owners and use it to pay off Cook county debts and deficits, he put the credulity of his hearers to a remarkable test.

If he can get his audiences to believe that charge, there is scarcely any absurd or outlandish statement which the innocent voters of Illinois would not swallow.

It is true that Mr. Small never once mentioned Judge Horner by name. Instead, he over and over again laid a multitude of political sins at the door of "Tony and his gang," meaning Mayor Cermak of Chicago and including Judge Horner, whose nomination was secured at the primaries with the approval of Mayor Cermak and his friends in Chicago, as well as by votes of the majority of the Democratic voters of the whole state.

Mr. Small read from sheets of paper a long and forbidding list of figures which he claimed represented the deficits and debts of various taxing units of Cook county, all of which he charged are under control of Tony and his gang. The grand total of these figures was said by Mr. Small to be $334,014,761.40.

Then warning his hearers of "the greatest danger ever faced by the people of Illinois," Mr. Small said in effect that if "Tony Cermak's personally selected ticket" is elected in Illinois they will seize the powers of the state and "saddle" on to the downstate people the crushing burdens under which Cook county is now groaning.

Mr. Small further asserted that the breakdown of Cook county credit began under the régime of Cermak. That former Mayor William Hale Thompson, who ruled the city of Chicago for many years and who is now Mr. Small's main sponsor, could have been responsible for any of the trouble seems to have escaped Mr. Small's observation.

It is a notorious fact that the taxing units of the city were all flat broke long before Mayor Cermak came into office, and it was on that account that voters of Chicago turned against Mayor Thompson and threw him out to give Cermak a chance, after the latter had served many years in county and district affairs. Cermak's record was matched against Thompson's in the minds of the voters of the city, and they overwhelmingly picked Cermak as their choice of the two.

Within his first year in the mayor's office Cermak cut down city running expenses to the tune of $8,225,000 from the figures of the former Thompson régime, and his economy program has not ceased to function.

But waiving the question of who might be responsible for the financial troubles in Cook county as between Cermak and Thompson, it is certain Judge Horner had no part in them. And to assert that if elected governor Horner could if he would bring upon the downstate counties the crushing burdens of debts and deficits which are Cook county's is something so preposterous that its very assertion is an affront to the 294 men and woman who compose the Illinois legislature, and in whose hands as a last resort is the power and responsibility for every enactment governing taxation in Illinois.

In attempting to answer this question we called up six prominent authors and asked them what about it. Four fainted, one said he couldn't answer as he had to send a letter right away to his fiancée, and the sixth one asked if it were really true that an author's wife was beginning to wear stockings costing six bucks and a half a pair. When he was told it was only too true he left the telephone, but the janitor called up a little later and said he had just jumped out of the window.

Behold oblivion in any fate.

THE G. O. P. But isn't there danger in that? If the Republican campaigners talk too much about Shakespeare, aren't a lot of the sovereign voters liable to get the idea that Bill's a candidate and vote for him?

WE ARE STILL DAZED over the decision of the New York judge that a mayor must be chosen by popular ballot, because we thought the mayors in New York were Tammany Hall members who took turns at the job. But, reviewing the list of mayors New York has had, we believe now we were in error. It must be that Tammany puts the name of each member on a separate slip of paper, then hurls all the names at the ceiling and the one that sticks becomes mayor. We can't explain lots of the mayors of New York any other way.

RETARDED EMOTIONAL DEVELOPMENT.

IN the early teens most children pass through a period in which they bear animosity against somebody. Not infrequently this feeling is directed against those for whom they have cared most. The parents are the usual targets. Girls are prone to develop dislikes, antagonisms, and hatreds for their mothers. Boys lose confidence in and respect and admiration for their fathers. While these are the usual targets others are likely to come in for this hostility.

As a rule, these animosities color dreams, including day dreams, and tincture activities and relations. They often take the form of dreams and thoughts about the removal of the object of their aversion, but the dream-thinking is rarely transformed into overt act.

This attitude is almost characteristic of a certain chronologic age, and is almost an inevitable step in the evolution of the emotions. It is a self-limited period. If things are left to work themselves out after about so many years the child emerges from it, passing into the next phase. This is a part of the child's schedule of normal growth and, beyond some pulling of the heartstrings, no particular harm is done when the period begins and ends on time.

But it sometimes happens that the child runs behind schedule. This period of evolution is reached too late in chronologic life, or, more frequently, it happens that the end does not come on time. The youthful characteristic holds on several years too long. The antagonisms which were reasonably near-harmless in earlier years may be very harmful now.

In the first place the child, meanwhile, has somewhat passed from the family unit into a broader social unit. Writers of schoolbooks and teachers know that up to a certain age the child thinks in terms of himself; next, he thinks in terms of his family; and then, in terms of playmates and other outside-the-family social groups. Antipathies and dislikes that develop in this period are more liable to run against people outside the family unit. Furthermore, the child has become more of a doer. He is somewhat less likely to dream, but he is far more apt to act on his aversions.

Much of the criminality of boys and girls in their late teens is the result of this dislocation of an important step in the evolution of the emotions. They had the same impulses that children have normally, say, six years earlier. They react to them somewhat differently because of biologic and social considerations.

Perhaps some day we will keep a journal for each child. In this we will enter the ages at which the child entered and left each stage of his emotional evolution just as we now enter weights, heights, and school progress in such life journals as are kept. Experts may take such journals and, comparing them with normal schedules, form opinions of a person's emotional normalcy.

BUNIONS.

Miss J. J. writes: What causes bunions? The slippers I am wearing now are comfortable and do not hurt in any way, although the ones I wore just before this did hurt me and I stopped wearing them. I think I am getting a bunion on each foot and would like to know what to do to correct this before it goes too far. I am 22 years old.

Also, what can I do to get rid of a callus?

REPLY.

Wearing shoes that are too narrow in front is only one of the causes of bunions. An X-ray picture of your foot, taken from above downward, would show sesamoid bones between the bones of the ball of your foot and probably more than one other bony abnormality.

Wear shoes that are broad in front. Keep your toes straight by wearing cotton, gauze, or something else between them. These are toe spreaders on the market.

HERPES.

R. D. M. writes: I have a skin disease known as herpes. What is the cure?

REPLY.

RAFFLE ILLEGAL.

Chicago, Oct. 1.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—Last year a number of friends and I purchased some tickets on a house which was to be raffled off later. We wrote to the occupant of the house for information regarding the raffle, but secured no response. We also called at the house and saw some one inside, but they did not answer the door. Tickets were sold at the house. 1. Is an organization allowed to sell tickets on a raffle and then not raffle the house in question? 2. Are they allowed to suspend the raffle indefinitely? 3. Do they have to refund our money if raffle is not held? 4. Can we compel them to advertise in a local paper the name and address of the winner? 5. How long does the law allow them to hold our money until the raffle is held? E. H. W.

1. Since a raffle is illegal as a gambling transaction all parties including ticket holders are parties to the illegality and as such have no legal remedy.

FROM THE TRIBUNE'S COLUMNS

16 YEARS AGO TODAY

OCTOBER 8, 1916.

NEWPORT, R. I.—Seventeen days from Wilhelmshaven, the imperial German submarine U-53 dropped anchor in Newport harbor today. Almost before the officers of the American fleet of warships through which the stranger had nosed its way had recovered from their astonishment the undersea fighter had delivered a message for the German ambassador in Washington, and, weighing anchor, turned Brenton's reef lightship and disappeared beneath the waves just inside the three mile limit. Lieut. Capt. Hans Rose, who hung up a new world's record in bringing an armed submarine in battle array across the Atlantic, said he had called at Newport simply to mail a letter to Count von Bernstorff. He required neither provisions nor fuel, and would be on his way, he said, long before the twenty-four hours during which a belligerent ship may remain within a neutral harbor had expired.

LONDON.—Official reports issued in London and Paris make the claim of important gains by both the British and French troops with the renewal of the Somme offensive, halted for the last several days by the terrific rains. The London war statement says the British have advanced from 600 to 1,000 yards along the front from Gueudecourt to Lesboeufs, capturing the whole of the village of Le Sars, less than three miles from Bapaume, the important railroad center and supply station of the Germans. The French advanced along the whole front from Norval to Bouchavesnes to a depth of more than 1,400 yards, according to the night official report in Paris. The statement adds that the attack "attained all its objectives."

LONDON.—Smashing with heavy hammer blows, the Russo-Rumanians are attempting to drive Field Marshal von Mackensen's German-Bulgar-Turkish army out of Dobrudja by a swift turning movement, Petrograd dispatches revealed. A large Russian force landed at the Rumanian port of Constanza, joined the forces operating along the Danube and launched a sudden attack against Von Mackensen's right wing, reports indicate.

PETROGRAD.—Battles of such desperate character are in progress along all four of the main approaches to Lemberg that, according to the growing conviction here, the next few days must bring a decisive issue of one sort or another. Either the Austro-German forces protecting the Galician capital will be forced to a general retreat westward of the Guila Lipa and Bug rivers, making probable the ultimate surrender of Lemberg, or they will have demonstrated the impregnability of their present positions and the futility of further Russian efforts to gain their long sought objective before winter puts an end to the present campaign.

FOOTBALL SCORES.—Carleton 7, Chicago 6; Michigan 19, Case 2; Notre Dame 46, Western Reserve 0; Northwestern 29, Lake Forest 7; Iowa 31, Cornell college 6; Illinois 30, Kansas 0; Wisconsin 20, Lawrence 0; Purdue 13, De Pauw 0; Ohio State 12, Ohio Wesleyan 0; Navy 13, Georgetown 7; Princeton 29, North Carolina 0; Yale 61, Virginia 3; Tufts 7, Harvard 3.

CHICAGO.—Once more, and for the sixth consecutive year, the White Sox are baseball champions of Chicago. They earned the title for 1916 yesterday by winning the fourth game of the series from the Cubs, 6 to 3. Joe Jackson was directly responsible for five of the six Sox runs, his home run drive to the flower bed in center field in the fifth inning being the feature of the combat.

THE N. S. F. REPEALER.

Chicago, Oct. 5.—In the editorial entitled "The End of the N. S. F. Law," appearing in THE TRIBUNE of Oct. 5, the writer says: "The N. S. F. law now is history, but it will furnish a chapter well worth study by any one interested in the methods of American politics."

The author of this editorial shows himself to be a better illustration of American politics than what he points out as an example, because he shows himself to be entirely ignorant of the facts he uses. Politicians are often not hampered by facts, and this editorial writer certainly is not.

If he will make a little study of the N. S. F. law he will discover that it has not been repealed and that the Supreme court of Illinois has placed its approval upon it. If the teachers now demand it, the board of education would have to issue these N. S. F. warrants bearing interest at 6 per cent.

A little study of the facts will show that there was no undue pressure brought to bear upon members of the legislature to secure the passage of this law. It was a frank admission on their part that the teachers in the public schools of Chicago were entitled to as much consideration as the teachers downstate, where such warrants have been issued for over twenty years, and that at a time when there were no funds and no opportunity to sell tax anticipation warrants these N. S. F. warrants should be issued.

For the editorial writer's information I will state that a section of the revenue law making N. S. F. warrants payable for school taxes has been repealed to remove one of the objections of the banks, but this does not repeal the N. S. F. warrant law.

In the interest of truth and justice to the teachers, I hope that THE TRIBUNE will make this correction as prominent as it did the false statements.

AARON KLINE,
President, the Chicago Principals' Club.

AND AGAIN.

Carlinville, Ill., Oct. 5.—You say that some of the teachers' spokesmen "went down to Springfield and induced the legislature to pass a law authorizing the issuance of N. S. F. checks in Chicago"; also that "no one has arisen to claim the doubtful credit of having lobbied the N. S. F. law through the legislature." If this is true, then the governor's special revenue commission was the spokesman for the teachers; for the N. S. F. bill was one of the series of bills that commission had introduced in the first special session. [See H. B. No. 39, first special session.] True, the commission asked me to prepare the bill for them, which I did and sent it to Mr. Douglas Sutherland, secretary of the commission that had it introduced.

You say that the results of the enactment of this law have been serious. This we deny. We know there is no demand for its repeal; and we know that the Supreme court has sustained the law in the Mathews case and has issued a mandamus ordering the board of education to comply with it.

You say that the "N. S. F. law is about to be repealed at the request of the same teachers who were represented as demanding its enactment only a few months ago." This is absolutely wrong, since it is not about to be repealed; the teachers are not asking for its repeal, but they are asking that it be retained on the statutes.

ROBERT C. MOORE,
Secretary, Illinois State Teachers' Association.

A DANGEROUS CROSSING.

Riverside, Ill., Oct. 5.—On August 13 my husband was killed on the River road crossing of the Chicago and North Western railroad in Des Plaines. This morning's TRIBUNE tells of another serious accident at this crossing.

Are the people of Des Plaines negligent in their duty in overcoming such a dangerous condition or just indifferent to the sacrifice of human life and its consequent sorrow and grief?

A railroad crossing of so heavily traveled a road as the River road, in close juxtaposition to another, the Northwest highway, without gates, lights, bells; with the railroad running on the left hand track, which is not generally known to the motoring public, and in addition, the town ordinances prohibiting the blowing of locomotive whistles! If the Chicago, Burlington and Quincy can protect a much less dangerous crossing in our village with gates, lights, bells, a man in the signal tower and another man afoot on the crossing proper, why should not the Chicago and North Western protect human life on their crossings?

May I take this opportunity to thank THE TRIBUNE for the straightforward, considerate manner in which the tragic accident of Aug. 13 was written?

MRS. L. HOWARD ABBOTT.

Berwyn, Ill., Oct. 6.—I wish to thank THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE for the fair and square writeup you gave concerning the double tragedy of Saturday, Aug. 13, 1932, in which my husband, Walter Herbert Rolfe Jr. and my brother, Lawrence Howard Abbott, lost their lives. We fully expected the railroad to do their part in protecting the crossing with the necessary safety devices. Evidently nothing has been done—as I am informed through your paper that another accident took place at this same River road crossing in Des Plaines Oct. 4—and that one of the two victims died. We would appreciate any effort you may make to give this matter publicity.

LOUISE ABBOTT ROLFE.

A POST DES MOINES INQUIRY.

Evanston, Ill., Oct. 5.—In criticizing Gov. Roosevelt's stand on the tariff Mr. Hoover in his speech at Des Moines said: "The main thing these foreign countries want is entrance for their surplus agricultural products into our markets. Many of these countries would decrease their tariffs against our industrial goods tomorrow in exchange for reduction on their farm products, but that is no help to our farmers."

Later in his speech Mr. Hoover said: "I am prepared to recommend that any annual payment on the foreign debt be used for the specific purpose of securing an expansion of the foreign market for American agricultural products. . . . That is a proposal of more importance to the farmer than any panacea."

Granting that the first statement be true, just how is Mr. Hoover to persuade these foreign countries with huge agricultural surpluses which they are so anxious to unload on us to open their markets to our huge agricultural surpluses? JOHN L. AYCOCK.

MARSHALL FIELD & COMPANY

Defrauded of $125,000, She Testifies.

Mrs. Sophie Krieger, 55 years old, the mother of two children, charged yesterday that officials of H. O. Stone & Co., defunct real estate investment concern, defrauded her of her life savings of $125,000 and her home. She told her story as a government witness in the federal court of Judge Charles E. Woodward, where Henry F. Norcott, president of the company, and eight associates are charged with using the mails to defraud.

Pausing frequently to allow Mrs. Krieger to regain composure, Prosecutor Dodd Healy drew the story from the witness. She said that eight years ago she purchased an apartment building at 1040 Sheridan road, on which H. O. Stone & Co., held a $350,000 mortgage. She was to pay $14,000 a year and 7 per cent interest, she said.

Meets with Treasurer.

In November, 1929, she missed an interest payment, Mrs. Krieger said, and then she had a meeting with Charles D. Packer Jr., treasurer of the Stone company, and Leslie A. Needham, the company's attorney, both defendants in the present trial.

She reported the conversation with Needham.

"If you'll play ball with us," he said, according to the witness, "we'll save your building. We have a plan to make a new mortgage and you won't have to pay anything."

Needham asked if there were vacancies in the building and was told that a number of the apartments lacked tenants.

"Tell that to the bondholders," Mrs. Krieger quoted Needham as saying. "Tell them that the city is going to condemn the boilers. Then we'll incorporate you and you'll be on easy street. We'll get the bonds at a discount if you'll play ball."

Refuses to Sign Papers.

Needham and Packer produced the papers for the planned incorporation at the next conference with her, early in 1930, the witness said. She asserted that she refused to sign the papers and explained that an attorney had told her she would lose everything if she signed.

"Woman," Needham said, according to Mrs. Krieger, "you've tipped over the apple cart. You can have a receivership."

She later received a foreclosure summons, the witness said, and went to Needham. He told her, Mrs. Krieger testified, that $14,000 worth of bonds were represented in the foreclosure suit and denied that H. O. Stone & Co. had anything to do with the court action. She learned later, the witness said, that only $300 in bonds were represented in the suit, filed by a man named Leritz, once a Stone employé.

Her next meeting with Needham and Packer came after the Stone officials had been indicted, Mrs. Krieger said, and they inquired if the government had asked her to appear as a witness.

"I told them that the government hadn't approached me, but that I would offer my services," Mrs. Krieger said. "Packer told me: 'You'll never live to do it!'"

Defense Attorney Benjamin Bachrach moved that all the testimony be stricken as irrelevant to the charges in the indictment. Judge Woodward reserved his decision until Tuesday morning.

After she had left the witness stand, Mrs. Krieger said: "I'm going to be evicted on Oct. 17. I'll have to scrub floors for a living."

KING OF KINGS FACES DECISION OF A SOLOMON

Ex-Ruler's Wife Begs for His Release.

ADDIS ABABA, Abyssinia, Oct. 7.—(AP)—The great heart of Haille Selassie, emperor of Abyssinia, king of kings and descendant of that great Queen Balkis, the friend of Solomon, was torn once more today between gentle mercy and prudent caution.

On the one hand were the tearful pleadings of a woman, the wife of the former emperor, Lidj Jeassu, for the release of her spouse, now held in durance in the misty, rain shrouded hills of the province of Gojam, to the north.

On the other was the possibility of an end to that peace which began to shine on Abyssinia and its emperor two months ago after Lidj had finally been rounded up and banished in the early hours of a summer morning into Gojam for safekeeping.

Trouble Began in 1913.

The trouble between Jeassu and Selassie began back in 1913 when Emperor Menelik II., who welded the kingdom of Abyssinia out of a group of independent principalities, died and was succeeded by Jeassu, king of kings.

The new emperor tried to introduce Mohammedanism into the region which had been Christian for centuries, and he was overthrown by Selassie, the Christian king.

Recently, however, ol' man trouble just strode down upon Selassie from those hills of Gojam. The governor, Ras Hailou, had to be arrested for plotting against the emperor.

And then Jeassu, dressed as a woman, broke through the guards that had kept him a prisoner for over 15 years and got away. Soon Jeassu was reported at the head of a large army in the steaming hills, waiting only for the end of the rainy season to swoop down on Selassie, his enemy, jailer and successor.

Troops Bring Him In.

Selassie sent a force of troops after Jeassu, however, and eventually the 15,000 spear bearing warriors and the government troops with rifles brought him in.

To finish up the work of peace, Haille Selassi also brought in Ras Hailou. He was found guilty of plotting against the government and sentenced to death.

Haille Selassie then came forward, however, and in a moving oration, handed down the executive clemency. At the same time, however, he banished the ras and confiscated all his feudal rights and properties.

Rubs Hands, Shrugs Shoulders.

Selassie rubbed his hands, shrugged his shoulders—and went back to the task of trying to get a loan out of the somewhat obdurate central banks of Europe. Peace reigned in his realm, he told the bankers.

Not long ago there were reports of rebellion again in Gojam, and its new governor, Ras Emerou, was hustled there in an airplane as soon as he returned from a trip to Europe.

And now comes the pleading woman asking that her husband who, only last June was brandishing the fearful spear of revolt, be freed again, up there in the Gojam hills.

SHANLEY, FAMED AS RESTAURANT OWNER, IS DEAD

Lawrence, L. I., Oct. 7.—[Special.]—Another link between the present and the old New York of champagne and lobster palaces was broken here yesterday with the death of Thomas J. Shanley. With his brothers, he was one of the city's famous restaurateurs.

Mr. Shanley was born in Ireland. He came to this country forty years ago and after first finding employment as a place buyer found his way into the restaurant field, founding the first Shanley's in 23d street. It was near Daly's theater and other famous playhouses of the day.

As the center of the gay life of the city moved uptown, Mr. Shanley and his brothers moved with it, and the place which they established in 42d street became as popular as their earlier place had been.

Football Togs for Spectators Win Approval

BY RHEA SEEGER.

EARLY football clothes—that is, the sort of clothes that wrap the female rooter with warmth, swank, and fashion—are now greatly in evidence in the sports departments in all the stores . . . trim, casual, vividly colored things that are as practical as they are decorative and new. Knit things that are spongy trifles to touch and carry, striped diagonals, bold checks and plaids, and some fuzzy, frothy, formless thin wools are among the offerings. And whether you wear them for football afternoons or just any hour during these sparkling fall days you will have some stunning new dresses and suits and extra coats and sweaters that ought to satisfy the most capricious sportswear critic.

If you like things Scotch look for the trick zipper frock, a perfect find for the gal who has money that slips a bit too easily into circulation. Pockets, one on each hip, that are closed with zippers, will probably give you remote control over your cash supply, at least they will make you stop your spending long enough to think while you slide the zip.

The frock itself is of fine flannel in a heather tinted Scotch plaid motif, with long sleeves that button snugly around your wrists with two gleaming nickel buttons. The neckline boasts of a self-material Ascot scarf collar and you can manage a high or low neckline with the third zipper that is sewn into this new rather startling woot dress.

Over this goodly portion of Scotch you can wear one of the new long suede topcoats . . . either in deep brown or a creamy beige. These windbreaker suedes are the most swagger things you can wangle for your fall sports wardrobe; they have capacious pockets, a wide belt that can be pulled tight around your waistline, and a good sized collar that can be turned up Garbo fashion around your neck. The lining is of lighter toned flannel.

Some other Scotch plaid woolens are featured in dashing yellow and brown patterns as well as a cheerful crimson and black combines . . . these piquantly different looking dresses are fashioned with a detachable cape that reaches the elbows. Long sleeves and a well fitted skirt that flares knowingly around the lower edge are some more things to like about these new designs.

New knitted creations seem to be more open minded than ever before about big loose patterns and very brilliant colors. One burnt orange two piece affair is a knockout, just what a color mad shopper would enjoy under the dark toned topcoat. A new knit fabric or material is being shown in one-piece dresses called ruffled knit . . . it is rather difficult to describe, but it looks like rows and rows of very narrow knit ruffles attached to a very loose knit mesh background. One thing is certain, these breezy looking open patterned sports dresses will need dark colored costume slips for a proper foundation.

Some new fuzzy angora two-piece costumes are particularly appropriate for the first frosty mornings . . . good looking ensembles of a simple dark colored skirt and a long tunic blouse . . . these long tunics are quite new and when they are fashioned of contrasting bright diagonal angora wool and intricately cut and sewed together with the stripes at right angles they become tremendously effective over the plain toned skirt. All of these casually smart new sports costumes are finds for slender budgets.

Hopes Bright for New City Opera Co.

Group Formed to Study Situation.

BY EDWARD MOORE.

Out of the ashes of the Civic Opera company is arising a phoenix which may some day, before many months have passed, bear the banner of a new Chicago opera company. It is too early to speak definitely of such an organization as an accomplished fact, but the signs are hopeful.

Despite the demise of the Civic Opera, interest in opera for Chicago has never died out. Perhaps because of the demise of the great company it ran higher. At any rate, a meeting was called at the home of Mrs. Walter Borden on Thursday afternoon, invitations having been sent out by Mrs. Charles H. Swift, Mrs. Kellogg Fairbank, John A. Carpenter, and Chauncey McCormick, who acted as temporary chairman.

As a result of the meeting it was discovered that great interest in the idea of opera for Chicago was being manifested by the following, who either attended or sent letters of support: Robert Allerton, Mrs. Jacob Baur, Mrs. Tiffany Blake, Miss Kate S. Buckingham, Robert F. Carr, Max Epstein, Mrs. C. B. Goodspeed, Alfred Hamill, Mrs. Francis Jonhson, D. F. Kelly, Col. Frank Knox, George Lytton, Ira Nelson Morris, Mrs. Robert R. McCormick, Mrs. Chauncey McCormick, Harold F. McCormick, Mrs. Francis Neilson, Francis Neilson, Walter W. Ross, Joseph T. Ryerson, Walter Dill Scott, Claire Dux Swift, Charles H. Swift, Silas H. Strawn, Melvin A. Traylor, Orville J. Taylor, Russell Tyson, Albert H. Wetten, Mrs Walter B. Wolf, and Leo Wormser.

It was decided to form a general committee of approximately 100 members; also, since so large a group would find difficulty in functioning smoothly, to form an advisory committee of nine to study the subject in all its phases. The advisory committee will be named at the next general meeting from nominations furnished by a committee consisting of Mr. Tyson, chairman, and Mrs. Johnson, Mrs. Robert R. McCormick, Mr. Ryerson and Mr. Wormser.

The general committee begins its deliberations with a clean slate, no prejudices, and no ties to any operatic promoter or promotion group. It desired above all things to have opera presented in the finest possible manner under the terms of a financial budget which shall not be extravagant but in keeping with the times. It insists that Chicago opera must not be confined to any one group, but representative of the whole city and seeking patronage from all interests of the city.

If any policy at all has been suggested, it is that future operatic presentations be made in terms of modern stagecraft, for the principal criticism made of performances by the Civic Opera company was to the effect that they had not kept up to date and did not follow the lines laid down by the more progressive of the opera houses of the world.

There the situation rests at present, with both desire and likelihood of accomplishing more than talk. If it is deemed advisable there may be a series of opera, if only a short one, this winter. If not, all efforts will be turned to putting it across next season. The organization may or may not call itself civic, but it has every desire to make itself civic in the widest sense of the world. It will be open to all who regard opera with favor, both as an artistic achievement and an undertaking for the betterment of the city.

The situation looks both hopeful and encouraging.

Stock Returns Full of Plans for Symphony

BY EDWARD MOORE.

Well rested and full of vigor after his vacation in his summer home at Ephraim, Wisconsin, up near the north point of the Green Bay peninsula, Frederick Stock returned to Chicago yesterday ready to take up his season's work as conductor of the Chicago Symphony orchestra. The first program will be played next Thursday night at Orchestra hall.

Owing to matters of finance, the orchestra will be smaller to the extent of ten men this year, eighty-five players instead of ninety-five, and the total number of concerts will be reduced from 128 to 100. This latter, however, does not apply to the symphony series of either Tuesday afternoons or Thursday evenings and Friday afternoons but only to the popular concerts, the young people's series, and certain concerts played outside of Orchestra hall.

Just the same, Mr. Stock is full of plans. "It stands to reason," he said, "that in the viewpoint of the conductor each new season should widely surpass, in the excellency of its programs as well as in their presentation anything that has gone before."

Mr. Stock did not go to Europe this summer, but he has a large cargo of new orchestral works ready to be presented during the season. How many of them will be played will depend something upon the response of the public, the willingness of the regular patrons to come and listen "with eager and willing ears, an open mind and a receptive mood," he says.

Of symphonies there are several. Bruckner's eighth is not new because Bruckner has been dead for forty-six years, but it has never been played. Igor Stravinsky has an early work. Miaskowsky may add his second to the several others played in past seasons. Eugen Zander has his "Sinfonia Technica," first played in Paris last June, a remarkable work, says Mr. Stock, outdoing both Honegger's "Pacific 231" and Mossolow's "Iron Foundry" in putting machinery to music. Among the Americans Eric DeLamarter has written his third symphony, Aaron Copland his first, and Howard Hanson his "Romantic."

Of smaller works, says Mr. Stock, there is no end, among them Stravinsky's "Symphonie des Psaumes" and Prokofieff's "Ils Sont Septes," both to be done in connection with Noble Cain's A Cappella choir; a new suite from Weinberger's "Schwanda," Ravel's piano concerto, another piano concerto by Arne Oldberg, John Alden Carpenter's "Episodes for Piano and Orchestra," and other works by Burlingame Hill, Holst, Kodaly, Honegger, and Hindemith, not forgetting the prize winners of a recent radio contest, William James, Berezowsky, Max Wald, Carl Eppert, and Florence Galajikian.

"I also hope," said Mr. Stock, "that it will be possible with the genial cooperation of Claire Dux to present a program entirely made up of Richard Strauss, in which Mme. Dux could present for the first time in Chicago several scenes from his opera 'Electra,' with the orchestra presenting the Couperin suite as well as the one drawn from the delightful 'Burger als Edelmann.'"

Fair Pageant to Recall Fort Dearborn Massacre

The Fort Dearborn massacre will be dramatized at the World's Fair replica tomorrow as part of the Chicago day program in commemoration of the Chicago fire in 1871. The leads will be played by Tom Powers and Laura Straub of the "Another Language" company and members of the 121st infantry under Capt. Paul C. Baumeister will represent the ill fated garrison and members of the Indian Council Fire of America will play the hostile Pottowatamies. President Rufus C. Dawes of the exposition will speak and there is to be music by the Horace Mann High school band of Gary. A city fire tug will give a demonstration.

Color and Movement Mark Show.

BY ELEANOR JEWETT.

The American International Exposition of Travel, Art and Industry, which opens today in the majestically spacious gallery of the Navy pier, is of unusual brilliance. Color and movement characterize the show. Along the walls are sparkling booths radiant with pictures, potteries, scarfs and autumn leaves. Great branches of the last named crisscross the background. Against the yellow and dull brown of the foliage the colors below are the richer.

At the end of the gallery is a great stage, large enough to seat some seven hundred persons. There are to be pageants by various countries every evening. Tomorrow Poland reigns, and Polish music, Polish songs and Polish dances will be heard and seen. Germany, Scandinavia, Great Britain every country will have its day. The entire consular staff of Chicago is engaged to be present tonight at the formal opening and the affair promises to be most spectacular.

The Polish government has sent an official display of arts and crafts that is picturesque. Poland is divided artistically as well as geographically into seven parts, and the crafts from the seven differ the one from the other. It is curious how climate and locale will affect, for instance, the coloring of pottery. The pottery from the Polish seacoast is bright and vivid and that from the inland mountains sober and even a little melancholy.

From Poland, too, is the brilliant hope chest beautifully embossed by hand. Rugs and scarfs lend an exotic air to the walls. The Polish contemporary paintings by the Chicago Society of Polish Artists are among the interesting events of this part of the exposition.

A model of a recent Japanese liner, glittering with gold, apparently, and protected by myriads of tiny, intriguing lifeboats on the upper deck, catches the eye as one goes to the booths where hang the Chicago artists' paintings. Here we find Oscar Gross with his capital "Chess," Anna Lee Stacey with her beautiful "Overlooking Cagnes," and John Stacey with his equally beautiful "Seine Reflections." Helga Dean has a remarkably harmonious disposition of blues in her unusual "Still Life"; Gerald Frank offers a romantic group of women and children in "Song of Spring."

Photography has been included in the crafts, and the Fort Dearborn Camera club has a stunning exhibit. A one man show of prints by Wyatt B. Brummitt of Evanston is worth seeing.

The exposition will continue to Oct. 16 and is exciting enough and interesting enough in its ramifications of effort to attract and hold every one. Travelogues in moving pictures are to be shown in the afternoons in the Little theater; the national groups take charge at night with color and glitter, pageants, dance and song.

Mrs. William Westerlund, president of the Chicago Beautiful association and chairman of the American committee for the Travel Show, will be assisted tonight at the reception of the Chicago consuls and their wives by Mrs. Bertha Baur, Mrs. Charles S. Dewey, Mrs. Archibald Freer, Mrs. Bessie Bragg Pierson, Mrs. Herman N. Bundesen, Mrs. Albion Headburg and Mrs. Marco Andrognа.

Arnold Joerns will officiate as master of ceremonies. The evening program is to be opened with a short address by the Rev. Dr. Preston Bradley followed by the presentation of the consuls. Among those expected are Rene Weller, France; Werner Schueller, Germany; Rafael Avsleyra, Mexico; R. Ross, vice consul for Great Britain; Luis Perez, Spain; Ursulo J. Dobal, Cuba, and Dr. Jorge M. Chavarri, Peru.

Assisting the reception committee will be the various women chairmen of the national group displays at the exposition and prominent leaders of various women's and patriotic organizations.

Mrs. Hoover Praises Girl Scouts for Aid in Fighting Distress

Virginia Beach, Va., Oct. 7.—(AP)—Mrs. Herbert Hoover today complimented American girls for having "thought through" ways of "helping the distress about them" in an address to Girl Scouts.

After an afternoon in her gray-green uniform, watching pageantry out of doors in the brilliant October sunlight, she turned to more serious subjects at the banquet session where she was guest of honor. She wore a draped evening dress of gun metal shade with a slight train.

In relief work last year, Mrs. Hoover said, Girl Scouts not only had carried out suggestions made by their leaders but had "themselves made splendid contributions in thinking."

Increasing community service, Mrs. Hoover said, meant to the Girl Scout organization "recognition of our power to help."

And from the standpoint of the girl it means a "tremendous character development," she added.

She said the Girl Scout organization had seriously studied its "whole relation" to "national distress, which is really always local," and had recommended plans in accordance with "the different needs of the different communities."

A Job a Day

Every little improvement we make in our home right now helps us—and the other fellow, too.

It's time to plan your campaign now against a chilly house, unhealthy drafts, and too high fuel bills. One excellent help 'gainst all those ills is the modern weatherstrip. Not are weatherstrips of value during the cold weather months alone. They reduce materially the infiltration of outdoor dust and dirt all seasons of the year. Don't wait till the weather gets too cold to have this done. Do it now! Louise Burgelt.

By Mae Tinée.

Good Morning!

"Cabin in the Cotton" is a stern, honest, and picturesque little drama. It is concerned with sociological conditions down south between the po' white "peckerwoods," or cotton pickers, and the landed gentry for whom they work.

The picture endeavors, without taking sides, to paint conditions truly. The result is a sincere and at times moving photoplay, which, while it settles no problem, still exudes hope that some cooperative plan may be worked out that will be fair and satisfactory to all.

Richard Barthelmess, though no longer a boy, manages to convey the impression of youth. He gives a forthright and engaging performance as Marvin Blake, the son of a "peckerwood" who receives his education and much kindness at the hands of a planter. In an ominous flareup of the smoldering, perpetual feud between landowners and tenants, regarding the theft of cotton by the latter from the former, he finds himself forced to take a stand. He does it—straddling—giving each side its assorted dues in no uncertain language. As a child of the masses who walks with kings his relentless presentation of facts clears the air. Everybody seems happy as the picture ends, with the possible exception of the planter's daughter, who, you feel, is to be supplanted in Marvin's affections by Betty Wright, a "peckerwood" girl. But the romantic situation, like the sociological one, is left in the lap of the gods.

Bette Davis is perfectly charming as the swift paced, soft speaking Madge, daughter of Planter Norwood. She was born in Lowell, Mass., but sure does handle that southern dialect like a native. Dorothy Jordan is just a leetle bit too sweet as Betty. Russell Simpson, H. B. Walthall, and Tully Marshall as moving spirits of the "peckerwoods" and Berton Churchill as Norwood who rears Marvin as his own all give splendid characterizations. I liked John Marston much in his several brief entrances as district attorney. The role, in itself, hadn't much to offer, but Mr. Marston's distinctive performance has made it a necessary and compelling one.

There are times when the story, adapted from a book by Henry Harrison Kroll, lacks continuity and when the direction appears uncertain. But in the main "Cabin in the Cotton," with its picturesque charmful backgrounds, worthy intent, capable acting and enlightening dialogue is a "different," entertaining, and worthwhile photoplay.

See you tomorrow!

MINUTE MYSTERY CAN YOU SOLVE IT?

BY H. [illegible] BURDEY

Dr. Burdey is professor of criminology at a famous university. His advice is often sought by the police of many cities when confronted with particularly baffling cases. This problem has been taken from his casebook covering hundreds of criminal investigations.

Try your wits on it! It takes but ONE MINUTE to read! Every fact and every clew necessary to its solution are in the story itself—and there is only one answer. How good a detective are you?

CLASS DAY.

Nearing a curve in the road I heard the start and stop of a motorcycle engine, and, rounding the bend, saw a man kneel by the body of a girl in the left hand ditch. I hastily drew up, got out, and discovered she was badly injured.

"Give me a hand and let's get her to the hospital," I ordered the man, who stood staring. "You can tell me what happened on the way."

As we drove along at seventy miles an hour the ashen-faced young man remained silent. After arriving at the hospital and seeing that the girl was taken care of, I said to the fellow: "Well, what happened?"

"It all seems like a nightmare now," he replied. "We are engaged and I'd heard rumors of her running around. When I taxed her with them as we rode along she demanded I let her out. She was mad, all right, and so was I! I thought she was only bluffing, even when she stood up. The next thing I knew she jumped out of the side car and lay there unconscious. You know the rest."

"Are you sure she didn't get that bruise on her head before she jumped?" I asked.

"Sure. I didn't hit her."

"Had you started your motorcycle and then when you heard my car, stopped it?"

"Yes. I intended going for help."

"Well, this was no accident. If she dies you'll be held for murder."

WHY?

Perhaps you have a problem you would like Prof. Fordney to submit to his class. If so, send it to the professor, in care of this paper. He will be delighted to see what his students make of it.

[See solution on page 29.]

President W. Coleman Nevils of the university made the announcement today. He said Farrell once a month will hold a round table conference for graduate students of the school of foreign service. This school was created through his initial endowment in 1919.

Foreign Actors in Hollywood to Be Deported

BY GEORGE SHAFFER.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Hollywood, Cal., Oct. 7.—There shortly will be a thinning out of the foreign actors in Hollywood, for Murray W. Garsson, special assistant to Secretary of Labor William Donk, and a flock of investigators moved in on the colony this week to study the pedigrees of several score alien performers. "Many actors and some actresses have come to this country on visitors' permits, and have just stayed on, sometimes changing their names as they secured movie jobs," Garsson said. "In addition there are others who never even had their first legal permit." The Washington chief said that it looks as if the films will have to begin to get along without 20 or 30 who face deportation.

Duncan Renaldo, who starred in "Trader Horn," but whose vogue dwindled when he got into legal difficulties with his ex-wife, Suzanne Renaldo, and with the government, is awaiting proceedings in federal court to determine if he shall be adjudged a normal American citizen of Camden, N. J., as he has deposed, or a Rumanian subject who jumped ship in Baltimore several years ago, as the government contends.

Moving out of Hollywood in advance of the government passport sweep were a dozen actors, several of them Britons, who have established a regular colony at Mexicali, on the California-Mexico border, where they are domiciled until immigration quota permits can be obtained through their respective consuls, permitting their return to jobs here.

There's some hitch as to whether Radio-RKO will renew Ann Harding's contract when it expires. The studio would prefer to pay less than Miss Harding's present $6,000 a week. Ann wants at least that much again.

The Murder of Caroline Bundy

By ALICE CAMPBELL.

SYNOPSIS.

Neil Starkey, American biographer, is engaged by Caroline Bundy to compile the life and letters of her late father, a famous English biologist. Miss Bundy is in poor health and seems peculiarly. She has hired a photographer, named Tilbury, as bailiff, and he and his wife, an ill-bred couple, hold a strange influence over her. Natasha Andreyev, Caroline's half Russian niece, acts as her aunt's secretary. She detests the Tilburys. Caroline tells Neil that her father, a man of science, was also a mystic. Caroline and the Tilburys hold nightly meetings in the library. Giles Gisborne, vicar of a nearby parish, and his sister Rachel are friends of Neil's. Neil is attracted to Natasha, but is baffled by her odd behavior. She is giving money to a man she meets secretly. Caroline promises to visit Emily Braselton, an old friend, in Paris. Natasha drives her to London. Natasha returns a few days later and tells Neil that her aunt gave her a pearl necklace, which she sold. She receives a wire which Caroline sent from London asking her to look for an alligator bag left in the car. The bag is not found. Caroline doesn't reach Paris. The police are notified. Caroline's body is found in a ditch near her estate. She'd been brutally murdered. Neil realizes that Natasha will be under suspicion. She refuses to account for all her time in London.

INSTALLMENT XXIV.

LOVE DENIED.

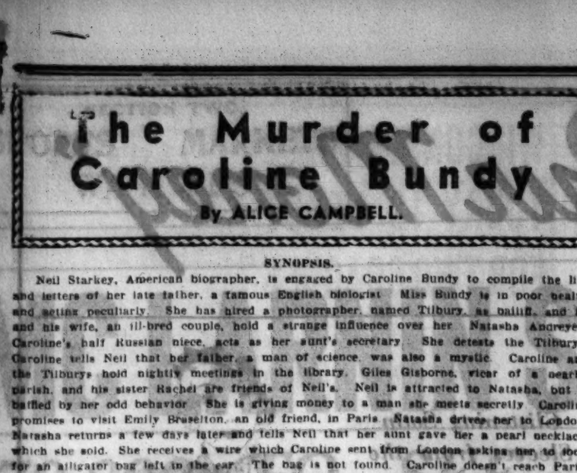
Beyond the clipped hedge the street lay empty and dark. Where could the girl have got to? Gisborne had turned a dull red.

"I don't like the look of this," he muttered. "First she tells us a deliberate lie about the Coliseum, and now she bolts off. Rachel!" He rounded on his sister brusquely. "What's your idea of all this? Why is she hiding the truth from us?"

"Don't ask me, Giles! I know no more than you do." She wrenched her eyes from his accusing ones. "I do think, though, it was wrong to pin her down like that so soon after she's had a great shock. You ought to have given her time to recover."

"Time to invent a more plausible story, you mean. Doesn't she realize we're doing this for her own good? If she has done nothing she's ashamed of, what reason is there for hedging?"

Rachel bit her lip in evident distress, but before she could answer Neil had swung out of the gate and across to the inn opposite. At the desk inside a mountainous blonde was yawning over a glass of stout. In answer to his question she shook her brassy coils of hair, but eyed him oddly.



"Am I to understand that no one but me knows about her giving you those pearls?"

"No, sir, no one's been in. Miss Andreyev! Surely you don't mean the niece of the lady that's been——?" Her glonting voice sank to a whisper. "Is it true, then, what we've just heard about Stoke Paulton?"

"Unfortunately, yes—but there are no details."

Not stopping to pursue the subject he banged the door and walked rapidly up to the point where three roads intersected. Nowhere was the fugitive to be seen, but as his eye lighted on one of the red telephone booths now so common a sight throughout the countryside, a possible solution occurred to him. Going close to the square panes he discerned a shadowy figure inside. Yes, he was right. He took up his post to wait, and at the end of ten minutes Natasha came out. She looked a little startled at seeing him.

"Rather clever of you to guess where I was," she said.

Without speaking, he took her by the arm and drew her in the direction of the least frequented lane. She made no resistance, only bracing herself with a watchful preparedness.

"Look here, my dear," he said quietly, "what's wrong that you won't give us that information? Surely you understand Gisborne only wants to make things simpler for you?"

"O, I do understand that, perfectly. I'm sorry I had to tell such a stupid lie. If it hadn't come on me so quickly I might have managed better."

"But why not the truth?" he cried, appalled by this bare faced declaration. "Is it so damaging?"

"I can't explain. I wish I could—but it's quite impossible."

"If there's an official inquiry, you'll have to explain."

"It may not come to that. I shall have to chance it. I can tell you this, though: I have no idea at all how, or by whom, my poor aunt was murdered, nor can I conceive how any one could benefit by her death."

"Then what you are keeping back has no connection with this horrible business? Nothing which could shed light on her being in Bristol?"

"Nothing whatever. I don't even think she knew any one in Bristol. Although it's only twenty miles away, I never remember driving her there."

"There's something else you ought to consider. Am I to understand that no one but me knows about her giving you those pearls?"

"The pearls!" She let several seconds go by before continuing rather breathlessly. "I think I see your meaning. No, I didn't like mentioning that I'd sold them right off like that, and now, of course, it may lead to trouble, I hardly think so, though. It's not as though she'd worn them. I don't suppose any one knows she possessed a string of pearls. I didn't."

"You can't bank on their not being known about, but never mind for the moment. What if it becomes necessary for you to—well, prove an alibi?"

If he had meant to frighten her, he succeeded admirably. She grew very pale as she exclaimed: "O, that can't happen. Why should it?"

"If the murderer isn't quickly discovered, you don't know what may happen. Would you, in that event, still refuse to give an account of yourself?"

"I might have to refuse." Her voice was low and stubborn.

Something almost fanatical in her attitude exasperated him. Tightening his grasp he said brutally: "See here, my girl, I know as well as you do there's a man in this. You've just been telephoning to him, haven't you? Well, then, let me say this. However blameless he may be in other respects, he's a rotter if he lets you endanger yourself to protect his interests."

Her pinioned arm stiffened. "How can you call any one you don't know a rotter?" she retorted. "And why assume I'm protecting anything except—my own reputation?"

"If you swear that's your only reason, I shall have to accept it," he answered concurringly.

His reply roused her. She flung back at him resentfully: "Why should I swear anything? Why, for that matter, are you taking it upon yourself to meddle in my affairs?"

Definitely angered, he blazed out at her: "Because I want to save you from your own folly. Chiefly, I suppose, because I have the misfortune to be in love with you."

The words, wrung from him as it were against his will, sounded strangely like an accusation. Under stress of his overwrought feelings he had swung her round so that she was obliged to look straight into his eyes. He saw her pupils contract, her lips part, as she subjected him to a swift, incredulous scrutiny. Then a faintly ironic smile hovered over her features.

"You—in love with me?" she whispered slowly. "O, no! That's a mistake. You don't even think you are. You may possibly feel you'd like to make love to me, but don't let's confuse it with being in love. The two things are quite separate."

Her cool diagnosis had the effect of water sprinkled on flame. He faltered, oddly abashed. Was he in love? He simply did not know. He could have sworn it a moment ago, but now . . . Well, perhaps it was only the old familiar emotion he had hitherto been too honest to call by the wrong name. Certain natures require the touchstone of mutual understanding before they can be stirred to their genuine depths. His, he suspected, was one of them.

Yet he was ready enough to argue the point, and did so hotly.

"Separate or not, it's hard, after last night, for me to believe you haven't got just the same sort of feeling towards me. Or are you afraid to admit it?"

"Afraid? No," she returned proudly, but with a look of bitter mortification which told him he had touched a vulnerable spot. She bit her lip and glanced away as she added with wearied shame, "O, I'm human, like you, though you needn't remind me of it—and please don't run away with the idea that the—the episode you mention meant anything—real. I was off my guard, that's all. I want to forget it."

He gazed at her hard, stung by her repudiation of what, to him, was a poignant memory. He exhaled a long breath. His hand dropped to his side.

"I see. That means you're so much in love with this other fellow that nothing else counts. Is that so?"

"We'll leave it at that. Now let's go back. Rachel will be upset by my behavior."

Without speaking they turned towards the vicarage. Only when the gate was in sight did she break the silence to make a request.

"I must ask you not to say what I was doing just now. After all, it concerns no one but myself."

"Just as you like—but I think you are being very foolish."

"I shall have to be the judge of that."

Rachel met them, flashed an anxious glance at both, but asked no questions. Her brother, it seemed, had gone out to talk over the murder with the local police. Natasha linked her arm through the older woman's and the two went upstairs, leaving Neil to light a cigaret with shaking fingers and reflect uneasily on what had occurred.

The last polo game of the season at Oak Brook will be played tomorrow with the Fort Sheridan team as the Oak Brook team's opponent.

Reception for Historical Society.

Members have been invited to make an inspection tour of the building, which has not yet been opened to the public. In the receiving line will be Charles B. Pike, president, and Mrs. Pike, Mr. and Mrs. Earle H. Reynolds, Mr. and Mrs. Frank J. Loesch, Mr. and Mrs. William McCormick Blair, Mr. and Mrs. Charles S. Dewey, George W. Dixon, Robert C. Mrs. John F. Jennings was elected to succeed Mrs. Franklin G. Clement as president of the Lighthouse Volunteer Aids at the annual meeting held yesterday at the Drake hotel. Mrs. Robert H. Ripley (Janet Kirk), who is honeymooning in Honolulu, is to be first vice president, and her good friend, Miss Anne Small, will serve as second vice president.

The new board of directors is composed of Mrs. Oliver Perry Kline, Mrs. Edward A. Fargo Jr., Miss Barbara Graf, Mrs. James R. Addington, Mrs. Robert Babcock, Mrs. Clifford Templeton, Mrs. Daniel Peterkin Jr., Mrs. Taylor Strawn, Miss Ann Elizabeth Walsh, and Mrs. Clement.

Mrs. Hibbard Opens Shop.

Mrs. Frank Hibbard telephoned yesterday to announce the reopening of her charity shop, Conveniences, Monday, and to tell us about some of the new services she is inaugurating in this novel shop.

In addition to exercising dogs she is going to bathe and pluck them this year—she won't do that herself, of course—conduct sightseeing classes as well as tours and she is starting a contest for children from seven to fourteen years of age that sounds most interesting.

She is selling books, blank except for twelve lovely black and white illustrations by Nura, and the child colors the pictures, writes the stories or poems or a novel to go with the illustrations and gives the book a title. On the day before Thanksgiving all the books will be returned to Mrs. Hibbard and she and a committee will award the prizes.

Mrs. Charles C. Haffner Jr. of Lake Forest was hostess yesterday at a buffet luncheon at the 124th Field Artillery Armory for the women on the committee for a benefit to be given there for Eli Bates Settlement house on Saturday, Nov. 5, and, since it was a first visit for most of the committee members to the huge armory on 52d street and Cottage Grove avenue, it was an interesting experience.

Luncheon was served in the officers' club, a stunning room with red predominating in the color scheme, the delicious food having been brought up from the little "estaminet" downstairs, where Miss Mary Senior and a group of debutantes will sell hot dogs and similar refreshments on the night of the benefit. Not all the food, either, for Mrs. William M. Spencer had brought fresh, light doughnuts from her own kitchen at 1430 Lake Shore drive and they and coffee were the best dessert imaginable.

The benefit program will include two championship polo games, military demonstrations and dancing in the gymnasium after the events in the arena. Mrs. Sangston Hettler and Mrs. J. Lawrence Houghteling are co-chairman of the committee in charge, and among the women working with them are Mrs. Elliott Donnelley, who is Lake Forest chairman, and Mrs. William B. McIlvaine Jr. and Mrs. Henry C. Bartholomay, co-chairmen of the Winnetkans.

Make Plans For Benefit.

The junior board of the Chicago Home for Convalescent Women and Children is planning a benefit supper dance for next Saturday night in the Drake ballroom, and from what I heard about it yesterday at a committee meeting it looks as if it would be one of the gayest parties of the season. Mrs. Harold Cudney and Mrs. Rollin Weary are co-chairman of the committee; Mrs. Allan Lockard and Miss Helen McNair are in charge of the sale of tickets; Mrs. Edwin S. Ford, Mrs. Cresswell Stedman and Mrs. Carl Leigh are arranging the entertainment features and Mrs. Robert Curley is press chairman.

Mrs. John T. Pirie Jr. of Lake Forest and her brother have taken a cottage with Mrs. Ward Ames Jr. on the grounds of the Homestead at Hot Springs, Va., and are taking part in the annual fall tennis tournaments at the resort. The Madlener twins, William and Otto, are also at Hot Springs for a 10 day holiday, and Mr. and Mrs. Henry L. Hollis, who have been there for a fortnight, are planning to stay on indefinitely. Honoré Palmer, who went to Hot Springs in the late summer, is to remain until the late fall.

Mrs. Charles F. Glore will return to Lake Forest this morning from New York. She went east early this week to enter her sub-deb daughter, Miss Florence Glore, in school at Farmington.

Mrs. William France Anderson has closed her family's summer place at Hyannis Port, Mass., and is expected to return to Hinsdale next Wednesday.

Mr. and Mrs. John P. Wilson will return early next week from a brief trip to New York.

Child's Frock with Bertha Collar Simple and Inexpensive to Make

The Fall and Winter Fashion Magazine, a new Clotilde pattern book, is now available. The magazine is 15 cents a copy, but if the order for it accompanies an order for a Clotilde pattern the price is only 10 cents. Address THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE, P. O. Box 537, Grand Central Station, New York City.

CHILD'S DRESS.

Small folk are wearing quaint bertha collars these days, and the one sketched is darling. The skirt fullness of the dress falls gracefully from the shoulder yoke. The cost of a dress like this is negligible, and the time spent in making it is very short. Dimity, percale, cotton broadcloth, and wool challis are among the lovely materials for its development.

The pattern, 2933, comes in sizes 2, 4, 6, and 8 years. Size 4 requires 1¼ yards of 35 inch material, with ½ yard of 27 inch contrasting and 1½ yards of ruffing.

Each Child in Family Has Its Own Abilities

BY GLADYS HUNTINGTON BEVANS.

Have you this difficulty to solve?

"I have been interested in your articles on bright children. I have two girls, 11 and 9 years old. My oldest will start High school in September and left the eighth grade highest in studies of 94 children and also the youngest. She lost two months of the term being sick.

"My trouble is with the youngest. She is just a normal child and will enter the sixth grade at the age of 10. She does not excel in any study and we have tried to make her just be herself, but she naturally feels hurt when people praise her sister.

"I do not want my little girl always to feel inferior nor do I want to step on my oldest daughter, who is doing so well. They are such dear children in their own way. Can you advise me?"

This is not easy to do, when one does not know the home nor the personality of the little girl, nor her talents. But this is such a kind and intelligent letter that I would like to help. General suggestions are all I can offer and perhaps that is best, as they will be of more use to others who are trying to work out of a similar difficulty.

First it may be the older girl's chief ability is scholastic, while the younger daughter may be talented in other directions. The younger may be musically inclined, in which case she might take piano lessons. She may have talent for drawing or painting or modelling or some of the crafts. She may dance well.

While accepting in a generous spirit her sister's brightness at school, she can be made to see that there is more than one way of being clever of gifted, and that each way has its own value. Let her know that many able people have not been especially shining lights at school. Let her feel herself appreciated and admired at home. Find some quality or achievement that you can praise.

Don't choke off people's praise of her sister, but don't make too much of it, for the older child's sake as well as the younger's. Without being obvious, bring forward the younger daughter's ability in some other direction than an academic one. All these things must be done without any evidence being given of the purpose back of them.

Sedentary Workers Need Brisk Noonday Walk, Says Antoinette

BY ANTOINETTE DONNELLY.

A friend and co-worker called my attention, the other day, to a noonday habit of workers generally. It's one that eventually brings on that desk-and-chair spread, the bane of women who've been working a few years or more.

She took herself and a friend as examples of how not to behave on a luncheon hour. One said: "Let's walk and get a little air and exercise before we eat." The other said: "O, why walk? Let's go across the way and eat." They went across the way and ate. They ate a sixty-five cent luncheon from tomato juice cocktail to ice cream and cake. They sat their noon-hour out gossiping chiefly of office doings, and slowly ambled back across the street to their desks again.

From nine until noon they'd been sitting at the desk, with perhaps never a single trip to the water jug. They got about five minutes walking at noon, then back to the desk for four and a half more hours of sitting.

Investigation proved that neither of these young women arose in the morning to the twitch of stretching exercises. Neither did a forward bend and back. And Saturday afternoons and Sundays, with very brief lapses, were sittings and more sittings.

Jes' no way to treat a figure! No wonder, in time, it begins to spread in protest. That spread isn't merely bad for the figure, either. You get the sitting habit so ingrained that you tumble into chairs when you don't have to.

Why not, now the brisk fall days are here, budget that noon hour so that the hips get a few good swings? A good fifteen minutes walk—not a drawl, mind you; not a window shopping jaunt, either — every noon-day would do wonders for the preservation of the spreadless silhouette.

Sure, it can be done! Easily! And for good measure, hie yourselves off to the washroom or some isolated corner and rise up on tiptoes a dozen times, stretching, stretching to full height.

Saturday—and again question marks have the floor. And, as they say over the radio, "In case you have just tuned in," Saturday is Question Clinic day for all food inquiries. Questions, suggestions, contributions, and all manner of kitchen quandaries which are not answered through the mail will be examined each Saturday and answered for you to the best of our ability.

First, from Mrs. N. S., who asks: "Please tell me why my sponge cakes are so difficult to get from the pan. I use a special ungreased aluminum pan and turn it upside down an hour after baking."

Such difficulties, Mrs. S., may be due to several things and it's difficult to tell which one yours may be. A recipe containing too great a proportion of sugar will frequently give a sticky, tenacious crust which either refuses to give way or leaves most of itself hung up in the pan. On the other hand, even a good recipe, if baked too long or in too hot an oven will harden the naturally sugary crust and cause it to bake on tight to the pan. You doubtless invert your pan over a rack or in some way arrange for circulation of air. Otherwise, of course, the steam would account for sticking. Special cake pans with extended center tubes and slits near the bottom for the insertion of a spatula to loosen the cake after it has hung insure its easy debut. I am sending you my own sponge cake recipe to try in case none of these other suggestions turns the trick.

From another reader comes the request for sweet spiced pears. The following is a culinary gem which should just hit the spot:

SWEET SPICED PEARS.

2 cups vinegar
5½ pounds granulated sugar
½ ounce each whole cloves, allspice and ginger root
Rind of ½ lemon
2½ ounces stick cinnamon

Peel the pears, halve, and core. Cut the lemon rind into fine strips. Turn the vinegar and sugar into a large preserving kettle and bring to a boil. Place the spices together in a small muslin bag and drop into the vinegar, then add the pears and lemon rind and allow the sirup just to come to a full boil again. Remove at once from the stove and let cool. Cover and let stand until the next day. At that time pour off the sirup, bring it to a quick boil, and again pour over the pears. Continue this on each of four successive days. On the fifth day continue boiling the liquid until quite heavy, drop in the pears, and boil half an hour. Turn at once into sterilized jars and seal.

Our last question, from Mrs. H. F. B., reads: "What do some cooks mean by 'seeding' their mayonnaise? They apparently add a little of a completed batch of mayonnaise in making the new lot."

Yes, this method often is used to hurry up the mixing of mayonnaise. If four or five level tablespoons of previously made mayonnaise is added to the vinegar and egg yolks before the oil is added, it seems that the incorporation of, as we say, emulsification, of fresh oil is made easier, for it is usually the first forming of an emulsion that takes the time and elbow grease . . . the later additions of oil may be combined more readily. It's much like adding a few grains of sugar to commercial candy to start crystalization, or a bit of gelatin to hurry up jelly making.

Neck, Shoulders Indicate Style Individuality

BY BETTINA BEDWELL.

PARIS.—[Special.]—Practical frocks that will be worn by fashionable women this winter will be very simple and cut to have slim lines. They will attain their necessary individuality by new kinds of trimmings and arrangements around the neck and shoulders. The trimmings are varied in a thousand ways, but they almost always contrive to give width across the tops of the shoulders, and to keep the neckline high.

The Vera Boren frock shown in our sketch has these features and it has its own personality, achieved by putting the popular dicky in the back instead of in front as usual.

This dress is made of a transparent black woolen with tufted polkadots as a pattern, a material which is much seen in Paris dressmakers' salons this fall. This skirt is slim but not narrow, and it has two flared gores set in at the sides, ending with rounded seams on the hips.

The bodice is straight, and cut in one with the long, straight sleeves. The back of this bodice is cut down in a deep U and in front is boat shaped. It is edged by a two inch wide bias fold of the goods. Inside of this neckline is set a white piqué dicky which fills in the back décolleté and the more modest front. It is topped by a little turnover collar having two tabs in front. The belt is of black patent leather with a double silver bar buckle.

Readers Tell Why Lonely Gal Gets That Way

By DORIS BLAKE.

You may recall the plaint of "M. F. W." printed here a short time ago. She is a young woman getting on in years with no proposals to brag about and no prospects in sight. "M. F. W." listed among her qualifications many interests, both physical and intellectual, an excellent character, reasonable good looks and the desire for a mate.

Let me report one man's reactions to this "lonely" case, one man's summary of what is missing in the neglected girl's makeup.

"The young lady states she has many interests. She feels that this coupled with an amiable disposition should make her a desirable companion. In my opinion, she places these assets of hers in their wrong relation to husband getting. The golf course, tennis court, bridle path, et-cetra, are hunting grounds, not courting grounds.

"The young lady needs to cultivate five qualities: adventuresomeness, fearlessness, a sense of humor, an analytical mind, and sex appeal. But above all, she must be analytical so that she may understand a man, understand him so thoroughly that she can fully and enthusiastically appreciate his virtues, gently chide his vices, encourage his ambitions and tactfully refrain from touching his sensitive spots."

"S. M. A." another correspondent, offers as "M. F. W.'s" great obstacle the self-sufficiency in a woman that serves only to eclipse male ego and sadly wound his vanity. "Men," he volunteers, "have different motives for loving a woman. Some hope to find in the relationship the house of peace. Some hope to find the way of ambition. Some hope to find the end of desire. With others, it is the love of beauty that is deeply implanted in the male heart."

"John Larson," barking to "M. F. W.'s" plea for enlightenment on why men pass her by, volunteers that men marry for need of a real helpmate. They need loyalty, understanding, cooperation far more than beauty, flattery and conversational ability, or ability at sports.

Lacks School Clothing.

"I am a girl of 15 and need shoes for school. My father is out of work and can't buy them for me and my mother is ill. There are eight in our family. I wear size 16 in dresses and 5 or 5½ in shoes. G. B."

Clothing for school in large families such as this one is cause for much anxiety on the part of the poor parents who simply cannot find work. If you can help a bit, it will mean comfort for the children and a great mental relief to their parents.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Ann Arbor, Mich., Oct. 7.—Michigan and Northwestern football elevens, sharing for two years honors as Big Ten co-champions, will determine that question of supremacy at Michigan stadium tomorrow afternoon. The greatest early season crowd in Ann Arbor gridiron history—perhaps as many as 70,000—is expected to attend.

In advance setting the stage is cleared for a hard fought and colorful combat between rivals about to renew football relations and thus decide the moot question of relative prowess on the field rather than in round table discussions of their partisans. To the winner it is the first hurdle in an obstacle strewn path toward the championship. To the loser it is at least temporary, perhaps permanent, elimination from the title quest.

Wolverines More Confident.

Either the long rivalry without actual contact or the importance of the game itself would be incentive enough for supreme effort. Combined they add extra nervous tension, apparent both in players and coaching staffs. With this tension of grim resolve, however, goes confidence, confidence in both camps and among camp followers, with that of the Wolverines perhaps the more apparent.

Under such conditions absence of bear stories is notable. Both teams, barring minor injuries, are in excellent condition, so all regulars will take the field at 2 o'clock, eastern time, tomorrow afternoon. Coach Kipke of Michigan and Coach Hanley of Northwestern both admit team morale is high. No excuses are advanced, no quarter is asked in advance. No unpleasant aftermath except the score, unpleasant to one eleven, is expected to follow.

Veteran Michigan Lineup.

Michigan presents a veteran lineup of letter men. Marcovsky and Damm, at right guard and right tackle, respectively, were reserves last year. Only Regeczi, pronounced Regaxy, at full back is a newcomer. This 185 pound star from Muskegon Heights is a plunger, punter and passer, a worthy successor to the lost Hewitt.

Northwestern also offers a lineup composed of regulars and reserves from 1931. Each eleven finds its principal changes from last year in the line positions from end to end.

Advantage of weight is with the Wolverines by an average of 190 4-7 to 182 6-7 in the line and 175 to 173½ in the back field. The most glaring contrast is at center. Here Charley Bernard, 211 pound pivot man from Benton Harbor, who drops back on defense to bolster the line or intercept passes, is heralded as an entry for Michigan's sequence of great centers who have included Germany Schulz, Ernie Vick, Jack Blott and Doc Morrison.

Riley Heaviest Wildcat.

Opposed to this giant is the diminutive Wildcat, Weldin, of 167 pounds, termed one of the most aggressive and fightingest chaps who ever wore the Purple. The line disparity would be even greater except for those 230 pounds of Bill Riley, formerly just brother of Jack Riley, but now Bill himself.

It is not etiquette to ask coaches for publication what strategy of attack and defense they will employ. From the lineups and from preliminary practice it may be assumed that Michigan will use both a running and passing offense. Harry Newman and Regeczi are passers par excellence. Petoskey, Williamson, Fay, Newman and Heston are capable receivers. Fay, Heston and Newman are speedy, the latter a great open field runner for slices off tackle. Regeczi may be expected to make frequent excursions against Northwestern's lighter forward wall.

Prepare for Pass Attack.

On defense Michigan will center its efforts on stopping Pug Rentner, Northwestern's captain, whom Benny Oosterbaan, after scouting the Purple-Missouri game, characterizes as the most dangerous back field man in the conference. Consistent plunging by the Purple is not expected. Drills against Purple passes have been stressed all week.

Without a plunger of the Reb Russell type, Northwestern will try running and passing. Its principal effort should be to get Rentner out in the Bierman's Pass Plays Kick Up Some Worries.

BY WILFRID SMITH.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Minneapolis, Minn., Oct. 7.—Purdue university's football players arrived in Minneapolis this morning, hastened to their lodgings, and then squared away to complete preparations to assist the Gophers of Minnesota in opening the Western conference season tomorrow afternoon. Three elevens, with one or two extras for this and that position are ready to take the first step in defense of Purdue's 1931 Big Ten championship held in conjunction with Northwestern and Michigan.

At the head of the platoon of muscle was Coach Noble Kizer, busiest of all what with acceptance of an invitation to speak at a luncheon of the Young Men's Business club. Oratory and coaching, particularly the coaching of football, seem definitely linked together, a sort of Jack and Jill proposition, although by this time hundreds of luncheon and dinner guests should be willing to testify that neither bears relation to success in the other.

Kizer Speaks Last.

On authority of Coach Bernie Bierman, who directs Coach Kizer's opposition tomorrow, the luncheon business in the northwest has stood up 100 per cent during the depression, although in this case it seems Kizer will go into tomorrow's game one up, since Bierman was without assignment this noon.

Kizer is one of the younger conference coaches, being less than a decade removed from the days when he squatted in the Notre Dame line and cracked up the opposition full backs. The round of eating, so far, has had slight effect on Kizer, although there is a suspicion of thickening in jowls and hips. His success as a coach continues to pile up free meals, but he still considers this a sideline. However, it is said that Kizer does quite well with his infinitives when the chairman raps for order.

Must Stop Manders.

Kizer also does not show the strain of the week after week nervous tension. He and Harry Kipke of Michigan, with some age advantage it is true, so far have sidestepped premature grayness common to coaches. Not that Kizer doesn't worry. Like all coaches, he does, and today was one especially designed for first class worrying.

"Weather? Always good for 24 hours of worry. If it rains tomorrow [quoting Kizer] our back field is sunk. How can we pass and run in the mud?

"Jack Manders is dangerous. A great full back, and if he doesn't weigh more than 200 pounds, my guess is as bad as the official squad figure which places Jack at 195 pounds. We've got to stop Manders through the line.

Bierman's Passes Good.

"Minnesota always has had a great defense. Any major team will play well on defense. And look at the veterans in the Gopher line. Michigan

25,000 to See Maroons, Yale Meet at New Haven Today

New Haven, Conn., Oct. 7.—[Special.]—Chicago and Yale university elevens, rivals in tomorrow's intersectional game, practiced in the Yale bowl in secret this afternoon. The Yale team drilled under Head Coach Mal Stevens only twenty minutes.

Three elevens were sent through signal rehearsal and the Yale coaches said tonight that it is likely that nearly 30 players will be used against Chicago. Dr. Stevens tonight adhered to the lineup decided upon yesterday which calls for the selection of Johnny Hallett, the oarsman, to start tomorrow's contest at left end, the position played heretofore this season by Bob O'Connell and Ben Grosscup. O'Connell is slightly out of condition. Grosscup, who worked today with the second eleven will be alternated with Hallett.

Lassiter to Start.

With this exception, the Yale lineup will be the same as that which Bates college checked for a scoreless tie last Saturday, except that the veteran Bob Lassiter has recovered from an indisposition and will return to left halfback. Because Lassiter will be unable to play most of the game, Stratford Morton, a sophomore, Joe Gilligan and Johnny Duncan may all be tried out in the position.

MacLean Williamson, who has been ill, today returned to the squad and he and his brother Clem probably will be injected into tomorrow's game for a brief period as half backs. The second string back field quartet was selected today as Pat Sullivan, quarter back, veteran of two seasons; Morton, who has been tried out for the first time with the varsity this week; Andy Callan, another sophomore who was used in part of the Bates game, and the veteran, Felix Hughes, who has alternated with Walter Levering at full back all the season.

Switch Nichols to Tackle.

The veteran guard, Ed Nichols, was today switched to tackle, and will be used as Capt. Wilbur's alternate tomorrow. Bill McCutcheon has been moved from the third team to second as left guard; Joe Johnson, freshman captain last year, will divide tomorrow's game with Victor Malin at center; the veteran, Allan Converse, has been named as right guard alternate; Johnny Kilcullen will be used for the first time this season at right tackle, and Charley Shea, a sophomore, will divide the right end play with Jack Sargent.

The Chicago squad of 35 players reached here about 4 o'clock, went immediately to their dressing rooms in Lapham fieldhouse and, following their practice in the bowl about 4:40 o'clock, went to their apartments in the dormitory of the Ray Tompkins house. They will eat at the Yale university dining hall while here.

Yale 2 to 1 Favorite.

Because of Yale's light program this week and the recovery of a half dozen outstanding players from slight bruises, Yale tonight reigned a 2 to 1 favorite to outscore Chicago. It was estimated tonight that about 25,000 people will see tomorrow's game. This is about 10,000 less than witnessed the Chicago-Yale game in Chicago last year.

Coach Stagg of Chicago said tonight that it is likely that Pat Page Jr. will be able to begin the game at full back, although he was recently injured. Storey, the brilliant heavyweight plunging back who was scheduled for the rôle, will not play because of scholastic complications.

Badgers and Iowa Renew Feud Today

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Madison, Wis., Oct. 7.—Here are a couple of fine gents—Doc Spears and Ossie Solem—back on the Big Ten scene after extensive absences, asking new football charges to show the world the excellency of their teachings. Doc has exhorted his Wisconsin Badgers to justify his technique by thrashing the Iowa Hawkeyes and Ossie has indicated to his Hawkeyes that it would be pretty swell if they were to blister the Badgers tomorrow.

Coach Spears hasn't been away from the conference as long as Coach Solem, of course. The former's last fling as a member of the Big Ten was in 1929 as coach at Minnesota. The latter's last protracted activity in the conference was as a player at Minnesota a decade and a half ago.

Coaches' Chance to Shine.

Of course, neither Spears nor Solem will be in the lineup and, strictly speaking, their presence forms what normally would be looked upon as routine and incidental adjunct of the big show. The two teachers, though, are getting more than usual attention because each is introducing a new coaching system to a student body and alumni group which had been more or less unhappy over the football results under the régimes which Dr. Spears and Mr. Solem have supplanted.

The Hawkeyes arrived here this morning and this afternoon worked out at Camp Randall. Those who were permitted to peep through knot holes in the stadium fence discovered that Iowa's first team is made up of bigger fellows than Wisconsin's first team. Appraisals indicated that the squads in their entirety are almost a standoff as to beef and brawn. The matter of skill awaits the morrow.

LINCOLN FIELDS RACE MEETING TO CLOSE TODAY

BY FRENCH LANE.

The Au Revoir purse and the Marquette Handicap, the first at six furlongs and the latter for 2 year olds at seven furlongs, are the final features. Each has attracted a large and stylish field.

The season which ends about 5 o'clock this afternoon has been the most remarkable, in many ways, Chicago racegoers ever have experienced. In the face of a year of depression the attendance, on unofficial figures, has been as good as it was during any of the boom years.

Betting Off 30 to 40 Per Cent.

The betting has been lower by some 30 to 40 per cent, according to the same unofficial figures, but the racing developments in Chicago this year have startled the turf world.

It was in Chicago at Arlington Park that Ladysman, the champion 2 year old, was developed.

It was in Chicago at Washington Park, Arlington Park and Hawthorne where the two leading 3 year olds, Gusto and Faireno, began their struggle for the division championship which is in doubt even at this late stage of the season.

It was in Chicago at Arlington Park that Equipoise demonstrated he was the master of all the older horses and became a great champion.

All the great horses of the year have been raced in Chicago for the rich purses offered here. It is probable they will come back again. While the race tracks in Chicago this year have not rolled up enormous dividends, the tracks have kept their heads above water. When the final checkup is made it is expected there will be enough profits shown to dangle the same rich prizes before the eyes of horsemen next season.

The Lincoln Fields meeting has been one of the most startling throughout the Chicago season. With admission prices reduced to $1 and every other item marked down to bargain counter levels the crowds flocked to the spacious and beautiful course near Crete.

Enormous profits were rolled up for three weeks. Then came the world series and a stretch of rainy, cold weather. Some of the profits were wiped away, but Col. Matt J. Winn says when the meeting ends this afternoon that a substantial gain will be shown on the right side of the ledger.

Col. Winn was so enthusiastic about the Lincoln Fields meeting that he announced extensive improvements will be made at Washington Park and Lincoln Fields before the World's Fair racing opens next year.

Rough Day for Favorites.

Favorites had a rough time of it yesterday when Axtel was beaten in the first race, Morsun in the second, and Bright Chestnut in the third. Gunfire also could do no better than finish third in the fourth race.

In the Glenwood purse Starbrook mustered the most backers. But the best he could do was finish third back of Kilmore and Bettina H.

Jockey Melvin Calvert again was the hero of the afternoon. He rode Kilmore to victory in the Glenwood purse and came back in the sixth race to send El Puma up in time to get the decision over Happy Fellow and Flying.

El Puma was the first favorite to win. Later on Beautiful Doll, ridden by Jockey M. Parke, was another choice to romp to victory.

Primo Carnera Knocks Out Ted Sandwina in Fourth

AGE AND HARD RIGHTS LEAVE EX-CHAMP COLD

Bout Halted After Knockdown.

BY WESTBROOK PEGLER.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Oct. 7.—Well, what were you expecting?

Of course Jimmy McLarnin stopped Benny Leonard, the old lightweight champion, when they fought in the new Garden this evening. Jimmy stopped him in the sixth round of a ten round fight with but five seconds of the round to go.

Benny Was Upright.

Benny was still on his feet at the moment of his final, official demise. That must be said for him. He probably did not know whether his feet were beneath him or waving over his head. He was very weary. He wanted to lie down and pant and rest and breathe. Anybody of the age of 36—and there must be quite a few of us at any given time—will understand how Benny must have felt.

Maybe he wanted a little drink to restore him. His mouth was agape. His sparse hair was straggling over his eyes and down his fishhook nose in soppy strands, saturated with the beads from his brow. That was an unhappy sight for the pugilistic G. A. R.'s, because when Benny was good and the lightweight champion only one fighter of that tough, hard punching crew of 135 pounders who comprised the greatest lightweight group since the great war, had been able to muss his hair. He used to wear it all plastered down with bear grease and shoe polish, and it was a point of pride with him to enter a fight in defense of the title with his hair slicked and come out with the title intact and his hair still gleaming as though it had been painted on.

Benny Got Busted Once.

One night in the old Garden when Anne Morgan, the daughter of the house of Morgan, was running a prize fight show for the benefit of devastated France, Ritchie Mitchell of Milwaukee, having been down three times himself, let fly a blind swing and clipped Leonard on the chin. It exploded his hair out of the patent leather fix and set him back on his hams. He knelt there, cross-eyed and dizzy as the aristocrats from Park avenue and Wall street, who were just being introduced to the prize fight business under Tex Rickard's auspices, uttered puzzled exclamations.

They didn't realize that they were the privileged witnesses of one of the most astonishing episodes of their time in the fight business. Benny Leonard, the maestro, was on the floor with a groggy, drunken, bloody opponent swaying above him. Benny Leonard came to his knees at the count of five or so and realized that his hair was hanging over his eyes in greasy bangs. That hurt his pride. He waved a reassuring glove at old Will Gibson, his manager.

It Was Another Guy.

Benny was a little reckless and impetuous that time. He had taken the short end of a long bet that he could stop Ritchie in one round and was working for his pickings when he took a chance and forgot to duck. Mitchell clipped him with a mad, blind swat square under the jaw and set him back and down and almost out.

He sat there and thought a while and got up, forgetting his one-round bet, to accomplish Mitchell in his own studious, artistic way.

But, of course, that wasn't the Benny Leonard that Jimmy McLarnin was fighting this evening in the Garden with $67,000 in the place and every seat occupied and all the survivors of his old public on the ground to exult or mourn with him. This Benny Leonard who tried to give away ten years to McLarnin in the new Garden, a Garden that had sprung up since he retired, was a scant middleweight of 150 pounds, 36 years old, with the outward form of an athlete, but the inward apparatus of a second hand job.

He Had the Heart.

His hair was thin and weedy and it was all over his face in dark strings before the first round was over. He was using nothing but his old knowing and intuition against a fellow ten years younger and just that much stronger and resilient.

Benny had to do it all in the first round or the second at the latest. Beyond the second, as he well knows, it would be just a matter of ducking and trying to stay alive.

Leonard made just one offensive sally. It was in round one. He planted his right on Jimmy's chin and made the youngster's knees jiggle. In the second Jimmy gave him a left hand boost under the chin and put him on the carpet for a count of eight or nine.

At the end of round four an old codger who was writing ringside pieces about Benny in 1923 came hopping around the ring and crouched behind the chairs of the more elderly prizefight reporters to argue that

Catches Brown Wren on Final Turn.

New York, Oct. 7.—[Special.]—Pooks Hill, Cornelius Whitney's promising filly, under a well judged ride by Jockey Robertson, overtook Brown Wren, the early leader, to score a length victory in the Yankee Princess purse, principal event on the program at Jamaica today. Happy Knot was third in the field of seven juvenile fillies which contested the five furlong dash.

After a slight delay at the barrier, in which Merry Carolina unseated her rider, Jockey Mann, the field left in good order. Brown Wren assumed command from her rail position with a three length lead on the field. On the last turn, Pooks Hill moved up on even terms with Brown Wren and responding to urging, drew away from the early pace setter. Happy Knot closed gamely after a poor start. The winner paid 3 to 1. The time was 1:00 2-5.

Regal Flag, breaking in stride from his outside post position, gained the lead going to the clubhouse turn to score well in hand in the fourth event, a gallop over the mile and seventy yards route, which engaged nine platers. Yancy, the favorite, closed an immense gap in the final half mile, but could not menace the leader and was second, four lengths in advance of Foxiana. The winner returned 5 for 1 and was timed in 1:45.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Columbus, O., Oct. 7.—An old friend by name Indiana, who has been treated rather shabbily in its football intimacies with Ohio State, is going to call around again tomorrow for better or worse.

These formal calls already number sixteen, dating 'way back to 1901, and of the last ten the Hoosiers can boast of nothing better than one victory and one scoreless tie, but on this occasion there is more respect for them than ever before.

Buckeyes Respect Hoosiers.

The Hoosiers are known to be carrying a squad of bombers. Practically the same men gave Northwestern's powerful eleven the scare of its 1931 life and they did the same to Ohio at Bloomington last fall when they rushed over a mud bespattered touchdown at the very start. That's why the scarlet and gray fellows aren't treating the engagement lightly, although secretly hoping to register successfully by about a two touchdown margin.

What Ohio fears more than anything is Indiana's backfield speed and its passing threat. On the receiving half of an aerial attack the Hoosiers have Fitzhugh Lyons, the giant Negro end who can reach to heaven for anything sailing over his head. With Eugene Opasik, regular quarter back, Lyons forms a formidable over head combination. If Opasik's passes shouldn't work, the Hoosier can turn that part of the job over to Adolph Sabik, a half back who tosses 'em for distance and with accuracy.

And if the air route should prove an all around failure a running game can be resorted to with both Ivan Fuqua, the Olympia sprinter, and Jess Babb, the Negro runner, carrying the load. It was Babb who caused Northwestern no end of trouble a year ago.

Willaman Stresses Defense.

It was this that caused Sam Willaman, the Ohio coach, to devote a large portion of his final rehearsal this evening to defensive effort against Indiana's choicest weapons. He doesn't fear the Hoosiers' line play so much, despite a professed advantage held by the latter in full backs. Willaman believes the beef and weight of his own forward wall will be able to act in such emergencies.

"Indiana is stronger than a year ago and it was strong enough then," spoke Willaman as he drove his boys through their rehearsal on the regular stadium gridiron. "Their attack is something that will have to be watched by the minute and their defense also is tighter than it was a year ago. If we beat 'em it will have to be by the same methods they hope will beat us—running and passing."

Either because of the psychology involved or because he doesn't believe it makes much difference whether a team has an advance glimpse of the spot on which it must play, Ed Hayes, the Indiana coach, didn't bring his charges into town until this evening. They won't see the vast stadium, incidentally only about one-quarter filled, until they get out there to look after the business at hand.

To Use Same Lineup.

After all the preliminaries had ceased this evening Willaman declared he probably would go back to the same lineup that started against Ohio Wesleyan last Saturday. Only two posts were due for a change. There was some liklihood that Ted Rosequist might supplant Sophomore Regis Monahan at one of the tackles and that Tom Keefe might shove Bill Carroll out of the right half back post. What Willaman has seen in the last couple of days has convinced him that Monahan and Carroll are all right, but that doesn't mean he can't change his mind before 2 o'clock tomorrow. In any event Rosequist and Keefe are going to be in there fairly early, especially if the Hoosiers should start off at a brisk gait.

Since Ohio and Indiana started mingling in a football way back in 1901, the Hoosiers have won six games and tied two. One of the ties and five of the victories occurred in 1913 and previous. At that time the Buckeyes represented only a warming up school somewhere in Ohio. In 1914 they began to get under way and since then Indiana has scored one triumph, in 1924, and tied once, in 1929.

1901—Ohio State,	6;	Indiana, 18.
1902—Ohio State,	6;	Indiana, 18.
1903—Ohio State,	16;	Indiana, 17.
1904—Ohio State,	0;	Indiana, 8.
1905—Ohio State,	0;	Indiana, 11.

CLINKSTOCK GETS HIS CHANCE WITH STECHER MONDAY

The card for the wrestling show at the Coliseum Monday night was revised yesterday to bring Jim Clinkstock and Joe Stecher together in the semi-windup to the Jim Londos-Abe Coleman match. Stecher, former heavyweight champion, originally was scheduled with George Zaharias in the semi-windup and Clinkstock was paired with Hans Kampfer in a preliminary.

24th Battle Against Bears Tests Cards

The Cardinals and the Bears yesterday closed a week of intensive training for their opening home game of the National league football season at Wrigley field tomorrow afternoon.

It will be the renewal of the oldest rivalry in organized professional football, which dates back to 1920. It also will be the 24th meeting of the two teams. Indications are that at least 20,000 will see the game. The kickoff will be made at 2 o'clock, instead of at 2:15, as heretofore.

Several Players in Debut.

Several players will make their debut in league competition and a few will be appearing here for the first time with the Cardinals. The Bears met Cleveland in a preliminary game here on Sept. 18, but the Cards will be making their first appearance at home.

Tim Moynihan, named to start at center by Coach Jack Chevigny, who also will make his Chicago debut; Bill Simas, quarter back; Jake Williams, at tackle, and Bucky Moore, half back, will play for the first time at Wrigley field.

Lillard Rated Highly.

Joe Lillard and Dexter Shelly, Lou Gordon, formerly with Brooklyn; Jap Douds, purchased from Portsmouth; Chuck Braidwood, bought from the Bears, and Elmer Schwartz, also from Portsmouth, will be wearing Cardinal uniforms.

Lillard starred at Portsmouth last week, and is considered a real find. He'll play half back. The lineup:

clear. Olson is the full back, but Michigan questions whether one man can plunge, pass, punt, and back up the line without wearing himself out. Augusten, who will be in there some part of the day, is a good line bucker and also passes.

Urged to Break Another Tie.

On the Wolverine locker room bulletin board, in white chalk, is spelled out "You broke a two year tie with Michigan State. Are you going to break a two year tie with Northwestern? Are you prepared for the test? Overlook no detail to have yourself ready." Each player was asked to read these words as he started off to the stadium for final signal drill and dummy pass defense. Then nineteen regulars were wheeled away to the Barton Hills Country club to spend in quiet the intervening time away from the town excitement and the pep student rally to be addressed by Director Yost, Judge Willis Heston, and J. Fred Lawton, 1911, author of "Victors."

Now let's take the train in to Detroit to the lair of the Wildcats. Coach Hanley, Athletic Director Wilson, thirty-three players, and attendants to the number of forty-five were hustled from their berths this morning at an unrighteous hour, unrighteous for late sleepers.

Wildcats Unlimber in Morning.

Northwestern's players will come to Ann Arbor tomorrow morning on a special train of five cars, including diner, arriving about 10:30.

1892—Northwestern, 10; Michigan, 8.
1893—Michigan, 72; Northwestern, 6.

Here's how Ookie Miller, Purdue center and captain of last season, will appear to linemen of the Chicago Cardinals tomorrow when he makes his debut with the Chicago Bears at Wrigley field. Miller has just flipped the ball to a Bear back in practice.

Most Species of Waterfowl Offer Plentiful Hunting

BY BOB BECKER.

All available data on the following species of waterfowl: the mallard, black duck, pintail, baldpate, ringneck, Canada goose, brant, and black brant, indicates that this group of migrants returned to breeding grounds this year in more satisfactory numbers than other waterfowl. The more favorable breeding conditions which existed this season should mean a good crop of birds for the fall migration.

This is the report which came from W. C. Henderson, associate chief of the United States Biological survey, a few days ago. Mr. Henderson added that the crop of young birds hatched by these species should enable them to "withstand reasonable harvesting by hunters during the coming waterfowl hunting season."

However, it's not all good news which comes from the Canadian duck grounds. Species including the canvasback, gadwall, redhead, blue bill, ruddy, bufflehead, shoveller, and blue winged teal have a below-normal population. These birds did not appear in large numbers at the Canadian breeding grounds, adds the survey official.

An experienced field naturalist of the biological survey spent the period from June to September studying conditions of water, food, cover, and the success of ducks in rearing broods in Saskatchewan, Alberta, and parts of Manitoba. This man also traveled 600 miles north of Edmonton to the foothills of the Rockies. He reported the 1932 hatch generally good and that from the nesting stock which went north in the spring there has been an excellent increase.

North Dakota is one state which has had trouble with the waterfowl hatch. As early as a month ago, reports came in telling that shallow waters had dried out and that duck sickness was prevelant. So serious was the water problem that many young ducks were found wandering over the prairies looking for water.

The survey estimates that this season approximately 2,500,000 waterfowl hunters will be in the field, a figure that gives one an idea of the popularity of this form of shooting.

Kizer Views Tulane Movie, Fears Gophers

"We got a lot of fine breaks last week against Kansas State. If we could distribute those through our Big Ten schedule it would help. And at that, Purdue only led 9 to 7 at the half.

"Minnesota's passes may be hard to stop. We took a look at the two reels of pictures of the Tulane-Southern California game last year [Bierman coached Tulane then], and how those Tulane boys threw the ball. Lucky for us, Minnesota doesn't have a Zimmerman; but then we hear this sophomore Lund itsn't bad."

And so on, with gossip of this and that, until Kizer grabbed a clean shirt and dashed for a cab in a hurry to meet Minneapolis' young business men.

Purdue Remembers Ubl.

At 1:30 the Purdue squad held a secret meeting at their hotel for final review of their tactics. Then the managers herded the players into cars, checked over equipment, and saw all hauled to the stadium for an hour's drill in passing, kicking, and signals.

Minnesota came out at 4 o'clock when the Boilermakers had gone to the showers. For a last time Bierman directed his players in pass defense and finished with a summary of proposed attack.

Shortly after their arrival this morning, the Purdue team sent a basket of flowers to Myron Ubl, Minnesota quarter back, ill in the University hospital. Ubl today continued to hold the gain in strength manifested yesterday and the physicians now predict his recovery. The flowers were bought with the contributions of the players, who took up a hat full of nickels and dimes on the train last night in generous gesture toward a fellow football player, against whom none has played and with whom none probably is acquainted.

WILLIAMS WHIPS MICKEY PATRICK IN TEN ROUNDS

Roy Williams, south side light heavyweight, beat Mickey Patrick of East Chicago, Ind., in a ten round bout at the Rainbo Fronton last night. Patrick got away to a good start, but Roy found the range after the second round and piled up points until the eighth. The East Chicago fighter made a game stand in the last two rounds but he could not overcome Williams' lead.

Jackie Davis, former Golden Gloves boxer, was awarded an eight round decision over Danny Delmont in the semi-windup. The bout was close, and many in the crowd booed the decision. Other results were:

Eddie Meyers beat Johnny Fitzpatrick [4].

Notre Dame Opens Today with Indians

Notre Dame, Ind., Oct. 7.—[Special.]—Notre Dame opens its 1932 football season tomorrow, free from all obligations to unbroken victory strings. At the conclusion of three weeks' practice today three elevens, the first of which is composed entirely of letter men, were ready to meet the Haskell Indians in the stadium.

The second team named by Coach Heartly [Hunk] Anderson has only three men who did not win letters last year, and the third team personnel numbers six veterans. With this wealth of seasoned material hopes ran high tonight that Notre Dame would again enjoy one of its numerous undefeated seasons following last year's disappointing finish against Southern California and the Army.

They're Victory Minded.

The Irish were victory minded at the end of today's light and final rehearsal. The strain of continuing a record string of undefeated appearances which hovered over the squad at last year's opening was absent. The team reflected a relief in being on its own, unhampered by the task of keeping intact another squad's accomplishments.

The eleven men named to start against Haskell are all well established in Notre Dame football. The line of Capt. Host, Kosky, Krause, Harris, Alexander, Greeney, and Kurth is virtually the same that carried the brunt of last year's campaign. In the back field Anderson named the tried and experienced quartet of Jaskwich, quarter back; Lukats and Brancheau, half backs, and Melinkovich, full back. These men form the heavy back field.

Nine Teams Drill.

On the second team Anderson had grouped what he terms his pony backs—Vezar, quarter back; Sheeketski and Koken, half backs; and Banas, full back. The second team line has three newcomers. They are Sturla Canale at left end, and Tom Roach and Mike Leding at tackles. It is on these two teams that Irish followers place their hopes for a championship season.

Nine teams ran through a light drill on old Cartier field today while Lone Star Deitz, considered the craftiest of all coaches, gave his Indian squad its final prepping in the stadium. It was evident from Deitz's drill that he relies largely on the ground gaining ability of Bob Holmes, 140 pound half back, through right tackle, where Fred Miles, 253 pound lineman, holds forth, and on the left handed passes of quarter back Bob Hindman.

Haskell came to Notre Dame direct from Highland cemetery, where the players placed a wreath on the grave of Knute Rockne. The lineup:

TOMMY THOMAS RECOVERS FROM ARM OPERATION

Tommy Thomas, Washington pitcher, who underwent an operation for a locked elbow Thursday at the Mercy hospital, was reported as "very much improved" yesterday by Dr. Philip Kreuscher, Chicago White Sox physician.

"Tommy is doing fine and his arm is coming along much better than I thought it would. He will be able to get out of bed tomorrow. I believe it will be about a wek before he fully recovers," Dr. Kreuscher said.

"Many other pitchers have had the same trouble. An outgrowth of a bone in his elbow has tightened up his pitching arm."

Cardinals Cut 3 Weeks Off Spring Training Season

St. Louis, Mo., Oct. 7.—(AP)—The St. Louis Cardinals' training period will be shortened three weeks next spring, President Sam Breadon of the club said today. Instead of a seven week warmup for the National league race, the Cards will spend only three weeks in Florida and one week en route to the north.

Bradley Team Invades Illini Stadium Today

Champaign, Ill., Oct. 7.—[Special.]—Illinois football team will meet Bradley Tech here tomorrow in Memorial stadium in the Illini's last game before opening their Big Ten season with Northwestern next week. About 35,000 Boy Scouts and school children will be guests of the Illini.

A brisk brush is expected with the Peorians, who scored once and dropped a pass across the goal while losing at Iowa last week. Nev Harms, former Peoria Manual all-around star, is full back for the Tech team.

Coach Bob Zuppke, seeking a companion to Bart Cummings at tackle, will use La Verne Joslin, Red Gragg, and May in an effort to find a suitable line combination. Kowalski, who was unable to play against Coe or Miami last week, will make his first appearance at guard.

New York, Oct. 7.—Instead of the rally promised by yesterday's irregular recovery movement, the stock market suffered another sinking spell today with the averages breaking through their mid-September resistance levels. Leading shares finished the session showing losses of 2 to 4 points. Thanks to short covering in the last hour, the closing prices were generally a point or so above the lows of the day.

Short selling was the main factor in today's fresh decline. Further weakness in wheat, more discouraging appraisals of the immediate business outlook and uncertainties growing out of the political campaign provided the bear element with ammunition for a resumption of the drive which played such havoc with prices last Wednesday. Turnover was heavier at about 2,400,000 shares.

Off 40 Per Cent from Peak.

At today's lows the industrial and utility group leaders showed declines of approximately 40 per cent from their highs of Sept. 8, while the rails were off on the average about 50 per cent from their autumnal peaks. While the losses of both groups were distressing, that of the carriers was modified by the fact that this group had scored a gain of nearly 200 per cent from July 8 to Sept. 8.

Just how abrupt the swing has been in both directions is shown by the following table comparing today's closing prices on the utility and industrial leaders with the September highs and the July lows:

New York, Oct. 7.—Moderate selling, growing out of sharp liquidation in stocks, took its toll in all groups of bonds today after the market had displayed moderate improvement in dull trading earlier in the session. Absence of demand probably was as much a factor as share weakness in depressing bond values.

Pivotal semi-speculative and speculative issues were in the forefront of trading interest. Numerous railroad liens posted appreciable upturns in the early period of strength, while certain utilities and industrials also found demand. These and other gains were erased, however, in the late selling.

Pressure was directed toward the rail division, resulting in de nes of a fraction to more than 2 points.

Utilities and traction obligations developed weakness in the course of the afternoon. Utilities power and light bonds and North American 5s led the former group.

Several industrial securities were under rather heavy pressure.

With the exception of Liberty 3½s, which rose to a new high for the year, government issues moved within a narrow range of yesterday's closings.

R. F. C. REPORTS $186,209,310 AUGUST LOANS

Trimble Again Tells Applicants.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Oct. 7.—[Special.]—More names of borrowers from the Reconstruction Finance corporation were made public today. That was done despite objections by Chairman Atlee Pomerene and the administration's known opposition to such publicity. The action was taken by South Trimble, Democratic clerk of the house. He made public the corporation's monthly report for August, names of borrowers and authorized loans totaling $186,209,310.

The total was composed of $122,277,641 authorized to be loaned to banks and other financial institutions and to railroads; $35,000,000 which the corporation agreed to lend to the farm board-supported American cotton cooperatives' association; $15,000,000 authorized for the Cotton Stabilization corporation; $13,931,669 in relief loans to nine states.

O. K. Chicago Loans.

Eleven Chicago banks and ten in cities and towns near Chicago had loans authorized during August. In the case of none of these loans did the corporation indicate that the bank had failed, up to Sept. 21, to draw the money. The loans to Chicago and nearby banks were as follows [interest rate 5½ per cent]:

CHICAGO—Ætna State bank, two loans, $140,000; Austin State bank, two loans, $175,000; Cosmopolitan State bank, two loans, $283,000; Halsted Street State bank, $126,450; Lawndale National bank, two loans, $125,000; South Chicago Savings bank, $125,000; Terminal National bank, $130,000.

SUBURBAN—State Bank of Blue Island, $56,000. Cicero—First National bank, $56,000. Highland Park—Highland Park State bank, $135,000. La Grange—La Grange State Bank and Trust company, $63,400. Mundelein—State Bank of Mundelein, $18,000. Naperville—First National bank of Naperville, $65,000. Oak Park—Avenue State bank, $230,000; Oak Park Trust and Savings bank, $240,000. Palatine—State Bank of Palatine, $8,000. West Chicago—West Chicago State bank, $75,000.

Loans to Banks Approved.

The total authorized to be loaned by the Reconstruction Finance corporation during August to banks, other financial institutions, and to railroads was divided as follows:

Banks and trust companies
[Including receivers]	$ 85,857,805
Building and loan ass'ns	12,294,188
Insurance companies	3,708,700
Mortgage loan companies	2,101,720
Federal land banks	3,000,000
Joint stock land banks	55,000
Agricultural credit corp.	591,021
Live stock credit corporations	2,667,922
Railroads [including receivers]	12,798,582
Total	$122,277,641

In order to meet the protests which descended on the corporation following the publication last Aug. 22 of the first report, which disclosed loans authorized from July 21 to Aug. 1, the August report was careful to show what borrowers had not yet called for their loans up to Sept. 21, the date on which the report was closed. The names of such borrowers were marked with an asterisk in the lists of loans authorized.

Similarly the report was at pains to point out that authorized loans might later be canceled or withdrawn in whole or in part.

Few Loans Canceled.

Loans authorized in August which were canceled or withdrawn in full totaled $3,471,571. Portions of loans authorized in August and canceled or withdrawn in part totaled $748,486. Authorized loans published in the first report which were later canceled or withdrawn in full totaled $5,552,400.

Among the latter were an authorized loan to the Mid-City Trust and Savings bank of Chicago for $320,000; one to the receiver of the First National bank of Gary, Ind., for $235,000; one to the North Avenue State bank of Milwaukee for $475,000.

During August repayments totaled $35,241,799, of which banks and trust companies contributed $31,301,176.

Advances to Railroads.

Railroads which received loans during August, with the amount authorized, and an asterisk indicating loans not yet called for up to and including Sept. 21, were as follows:

Ashley, Drew and Northern	$ 400,000
Boston & Maine	1,200,000
Central of Georgia	827,484
Chicago & Eastern Illinois	753,500
Chicago Great Western	1,280,000
Florida East Coast receivers	50,850
Mobile and Ohio, receiver	1,070,300
New York, Chicago & St. Louis	1,400,000
St. Louis Southwestern	684,450
Tennessee Central	147,700
Wabash, receivers	*4,375,000
Wichita Falls & Southern	400,000

Treasury Buys R. F. C. Notes.

During August the corporation sold the secretary of the treasury the final $25,000,000 of the $250,000,000 "second series" 3½ per cent notes authorized on June 16, and $75,000,000 of the $250,000,000 "third series" 3½ per cent notes authorized on July 23.

With the $250,000,000 received through the sale of the first note series and the 500 millions received from the treasury for capital stock this brought the total which the corporation has received from the federal government to $1,075,000,000.

Capital Begs for Work All Over World

BY SCRUTATOR.

Capital the world over is going begging for safe employment. Conservative investors are willing to take moderate returns, provided the safety of their funds is assured. The success of the British and French governments in refunding considerable portions of their internal war loans at lower interest rates is evidence that even Europe still has plenty of capital.

Even more significant is the fact that the United States government now is able to borrow through the medium of short term issues at interest rates that represent the lowest cost for capital in our history. This situation has raised the question whether the United States, following the example of Great Britain and France, should take advantage of the opportunity to refund part of its debt at a saving in interest.

The British government announced last week that 92 per cent of its 5 per cent war loan, representing nearly 7½ billion dollars at current exchange rates, had been offered by bondholders in exchange for new 3½ per cent bonds. This conversion will effect a saving of nearly 103 million dollars a year in interest charges. Moreover, the refunding operation affects about one-third of the total domestic debt.

French Reduce Interest.

The French government announced last Monday that more than 97 per cent of issues of war bonds, totaling about three billion 315 million dollars and bearing interest ranging from 5 to 7 per cent, were offered by holders in exchange for new bonds bearing 4½ per cent. This conversion will result in a saving of nearly 50 million dollars a year in interest.

The war loans of the United States and subsequent refunding issues were floated at lower rates than Great Britain and France were forced to pay. Moreover, a large portion of our original loans have been refunded through issuance of securities bearing lower interest. However, there are still outstanding the First Liberty 3½ per cent bonds, totaling about one billion 392 million dollars, and the Fourth Liberty 4¼ per cent bonds, aggregating around 6 billion 268 million dollars. These two issues represent more than one-third of our domestic debt.

Interest on the Fourth Liberty bonds at 4¼ per cent is the highest rate being paid on any obligations of the United States government, except for converted Liberty 4 and 4¼ per cent bonds, totaling about 541 million dollars, and an issue of 4¼ per cent treasury bonds put out in 1922 and not retirable until 1947. These latter bonds aggregate about 759 million dollars. Interest rates on other issues of treasury bonds and certificates of indebtedness range from 4 down to 1½ per cent.

However, the federal treasury for the last year has done a large part of its financing by issuing treasury bills generally maturing in about 90 days. These bills bear no interest and are sold to bidders at a discount. Such bills were sold this week at a price that afforded interest of less than one-fourth of 1 per cent, figured on an annual basis.

The United States government since last June has had the privilege of redeeming the First Liberty 3½ per cent bonds and the converted 4 and 4¼ per cent issues, which aggregate one billion 933 million dollars. The Fourth Liberty 4¼ per cent bonds may be redeemed after Oct. 15, 1933. Bankers believe these issues could be refunded through issues bearing somewhat lower rates except for one chief obstacle. This is the prospective heavy and continual borrowing by the government in the future to defray expenditures for the various reconstruction measures and to make up for possible deficits.

BANK HEADED BY EXAMINER IS PUT IN RECEIVERSHIP

Lewisville, Ind., Oct. 7.—(AP)—The First National bank of this city was closed today and its affairs placed in the hands of a national bank examiner. Closing of the institution followed the revelation of a depositors' meeting yesterday that Hawley Hall, cashier, has been missing since Sept. 23.

Luther F. Symons, state banking commissioner, is president of the bank. Symons has been here aiding in an examination of Hall's accounts. The banking commissioner said no shortage had thus far been discovered in the bank's funds but a check indicated that some securities left by the bank's customers were missing.

12 MILLIONS READY FOR FEDERAL LOANS TO AGRICULTURISTS

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Oct. 7.—[Special.]—The Reconstruction Finance corporation today deposited 12 million dollars with the treasury department as capital for four of its agricultural credit corporations and announced that first loans from the fund will be made within twenty-four hours.

The four regionals provided with working capital today are located at Sioux City, Ia.; Salt Lake City, Utah; Spokane, Wash., and Columbus, O. The 12 millions represented a capitalization of three millions for each of the four offices.

Ford Hovey, head of the agricultural activities of the finance corporation, stated that the twelve millions was placed with the treasury department subject to call of the four regional agencies. Reconstruction Finance corporation money, he said, will not be placed with the individual agricultural corporation offices, but all loan checks will be drawn on the treasury.

Mr. Hovey said the remaining six of the corporation's ten agricultural credit agencies are virtually ready to begin operations.

The agricultural credit corporations will make loans direct to individual farmers and stockmen, for crop production, and raising, breeding, fattening, or marketing of live stock.

President Coolidge's re-election in 1924 was never in doubt. The bitter Democratic convention fight between McAdoo and Smith had developed so much bitter feeling between factions that an enthusiastic fight for the conservative, able candidate Davis was not possible. In addition, the radicals among the Republicans were diverted not to the Democrats but to the La Follette third party candidacy. Much of 1924 was not favorable to the party in power, because of the prevailing mild depression. However, revival began in the autumn before election and though crops were large, farm prices, except cotton, rose briskly, especially wheat. Stock prices marked time from about the first of September until the middle of October. At that time a rise began which carried on through November and well into the next year.

TOMORROW THE HOOVER-SMITH ELECTION OF 1928

Court Denies Receiver for Nickel Plate

A petition for a receiver filed early this week against the New York, Chicago and St. Louis Railroad company [the Nickel Plate line] was denied yesterday by Judge James H. Wilkerson in the United States District court.

The petition for a receiver was filed by Attorney Leo S. Samuels on behalf of Samuel Kaplan of Detroit, holder of three $1,000 Nickel Plate bonds due Oct. 1, 1932, which are now in default. Attorney Samuels was given 20 days in which to file an amended bill.

In denying the petition, Judge Wilkerson said:

"In referring to the evidence I find it entirely insignificant to appoint a receiver. I will not take the road into the hands of the court on this showing."

Road Borrows Ten Million.

John D. Black, attorney for the Nickel Plate, which forms a part of the huge railroad system controlled by the Van Sweringen brothers of Cleveland, in his argument before the court said that there was no showing in Kaplan's bill which warranted the appointment of a receiver. He said that the road had already been able to borrow $10,000,000 through the Reconstruction Finance corporation and was negotiating to obtain $5,500,000 more.

The Nickel Plate's bonds will be paid and the road is not insolvent. Attorney Black argued, saying "The Reconstruction Finance corporation must think the road a good risk or it would not have made loans to it."

Promised New Loan.

The Nickel Plate's attorney also stated that the railroad proposes to fund the $20,000,000 notes, which includes the $3,000 held by Kaplan. He asserted that already 75 per cent of the holders of bonds have deposited them under the plan by which the railroad is to pay 25 per cent in cash now and extend the balance due to Oct. 1, 1935.

The Reconstruction Finance corporation previously announced that if the road succeeds in securing a deposit of substantially the entire $20,000,000 in notes outstanding, it will grant the loan of $5,500,000 necessary for the success of the plan.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Oct. 7.—New York City bond prices, which have fluctuated sensitively with the recent shifts in the city's political affairs, broke emphatically yesterday on the news of the nomination of Surrogate John P. O'Brien by Tammany for mayor.

The reaction, amounting to 2½ points in the most active issues, wiped out all but half a point of the gains made by the city's obligations since the resignation of Former Mayor Walker on Sept. 1.

INSULL NOTES BRING 2% OF PAR IN MARKET HERE

Six debentures of Insull Utility Investments, Inc., were traded on the Chicago exchange yesterday on a price basis of $2 for each $100 par value. The par value of the issues traded is $6,000, as compared to the present nominal market value of $120.

The present quotations on the debentures represents some speculator's appraisal of the prospects that the trust will recover some of its assets for the benefit of the senior security holders. The current quotation can hardly be accepted as a fair appraisal of those prospects because the present market is limited. Persons in touch with the situation are unwilling to hazard a guess as to the chances of the debenture holders, but it is generally considered that they are extremely slender.

Sleepy Citizens Create Problem.

The B. F. Goodrich company is faced with an unusual problem. A quarter of a century ago the company manufactured thousands of rubber horse shoes. It was an important product in the company's line prior to rise of the motor car. As automobile production expanded the demand for rubber horse shoes declined and the demand for auto tires grew. Fifteen years ago the company discontinued the manufacture of the shoes and the moulds were stored away. Recently inquiries for rubber horse shoes were received from several cities after several municipalities had passed ordinances requiring the use of rubber horse shoes by milk companies to lessen the noise of early morning deliveries. The company is undecided as to whether or not it will resume production of the shoes.

Customers Ignore Cheap Goods.

Signs of better times in the retail field are seen in the reports of merchants that customers are no longer demanding cheap goods only. One dealer in men's clothing who has made a specialty of $25 and $35 suits and coats for several months reports that last month his sales averaged $52 per unit. He featured his cheaper line, but the public bought higher priced articles.

Remove "Closed Bank" Signs.

The Chicago Federation of Cook County bankers has succeeded in having most of the "Closed" signs removed from buildings formerly housing banks. The signs are said to have been bad for business in the neighborhoods in which the signs were posted.

I. C. C. O. K.'s Employment Loan to New Haven Road

Washington, D. C., Oct. 7.—A loan of $700,000 to the New York, New Haven and Hartford Railroad company from the Reconstruction Finance corporation, for the purpose of providing employment and stimulating business through the repairing of cars and locomotives, was approved today by the interstate commerce commission. The New Haven plans to repair 93 locomotives and 160 freight cars and estimates that this will afford employment for approximately 400 men for a period of about six months.

U. S. Steel Stockholders Continue to Increase

The number of holders of United States Steel common stock continued to increase in the three months ended Sept. 30. There were 190,284 holders on Oct. 1, compared with 190,024 at the end of June and 186,981 on March 31, last. On Sept. 30, 1931, there were 166,788 holders of the junior stock. In August the preferred dividend went to 61,655 holders, against 60,407 in May and 57,966 in August of last year.

Rise in Eggs Brings Demand for Hennery Equipment

E. E. Behler of Grand Rapids, Mich., president of the Poultry Equipment association, said today at a meeting of the organization that a 50 per cent advance in the price of eggs during the last month presaged a decided upturn in the poultry equipment business and that "demand for equipment is already being felt."

Residential Building Up $2,000,000 in 37 States

Residential building awards in the 37 eastern states totaled $22,803,900, an increase of about $2,000,000 over August, reports the F. W. Dodge corporation. The company's announcement says "the current gain appears as the most promising single sign on the business horizon."

More Roads Join Fight on Seatrains

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Oct. 7.—Railroads opposed to the freight carrying operations of Seatrain Lines, Inc., between New York and New Orleans were permitted by the interstate commerce commission to intervene in proceedings in which the Missouri Pacific and the Texas and Pacific railroads seek a ruling that their stock interests in the Seatrain company are not in violation of law. The Seatrain Lines proposed to operate vessels carrying freight cars.

The opposing interveners include eastern trunk line railroads, the New York, New Haven and Hartford, the Southern Pacific and allied lines. They allege that the stock interest of the Missouri Pacific and the Texas and Pacific in the Seatrain company is in violation of that part of the Panama canal act dealing with interest of railroads in water lines.

One of the purposes of the Seatrain operation is to divert traffic from established all-rail routes between New England and trunk line territory on the one hand, and southwestern territory on the other, by affording non-break-bulk service, it is alleged.

Ownership by the Missouri Pacific and Texas and Pacific of stock in the Seatrain company, the Southern Pacific alleges, is not in the public interest. It is further charged that the Seatrain company is subsidized by the government through loans for the building of its ships and mail subsidy payments.

EXCHANGE RISES AS EUROPEANS TAKE PROFITS

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Oct. 7.—Continental European exchanges rallied strongly against the dollar today. The movement, which was the widest since the European fear for the safety of the gold standard in this country subsided last June, was variously ascribed to the liquidation of foreign commitments in our stock market and to renewed fears abroad over the dollar.

European traders who had participated in the recovery of security prices here are reported to have been taking profits lately, and the sudden uprush of francs, belgas, guilders, and Swiss francs yesterday was interpreted as a sign that these profits were being called home. This explanation accorded well with the acute weakness of the stock market in the last two days.

Closed Leroy Bank Pays Depositors 35% Dividend

Leroy, Ill., Oct. 7.—[Special.]—A dividend of 35 per cent was paid today to depositors of the First National bank of Leroy by H. O. Freidmann, receiver. The dividend is being paid from funds received from liquidation, supplemented by a loan from the Reconstruction Finance corporation.

BANKS, LOADED WITH CASH, ASK TO BE SHOWN

BY HOWARD WOOD.

Banks are in much better position. They are in excellent condition to make loans to good borrowers. The return of public confidence in banks, and in the dollar, combined with the easy money policy of the federal reserve system practically assures industry of easy money for months to come.

But there's a rub. The big corporations that ordinarily are the heaviest borrowers from the banks aren't borrowing money from that source, some because they still have big surpluses left over from the years of big earnings and others because their present and prospective earnings don't sufficiently impress the bankers who might make loans.

The banks are loaded down with money. And there are plenty of people who want to borrow money. The only reason there are so few loans being made is that very few of the people who want money can assure the prospective lender that it will be repaid when due.

Assurance of profits to corporations is the chief need of the times. Once the employer is assured that results will be in the black he can get money either from banks or from investors and begin to employ men. "Consuming power" would develop later as a natural result.

The recent nation wide campaign against high taxes promises hope for industry. If, as now seems possible, taxes are reduced, industry will be able to use the money that otherwise would have gone to the government to expand business, thereby increasing employment. With lower taxes to pay, many companies will be able to report profits instead of losses.

BUSINESS BETTER

Although heavy industries have not shown the degree of improvement promised for them a month ago, small manufacturers and merchants—both wholesale and retail—have been experiencing better business.

Trade reviews for the week yesterday were unanimous in recording improvement in the general business situation, with merchants feeling the pressure of seasonal demand.

"The final quarter of a difficult year has opened with business in a stronger position that it was three months ago and decidedly improved over the status at the comparative period of 1931, offering irrefutable evidence that underlying conditions have changed definitely and that improvement will manifest itself as time goes on," says Dun's review.

Fear Declines.

"The economic trend is expected to be interrupted temporarily by extraneous influences, but not reversed for any extended length of time.

"Fear of severe inventory shrinkage has lost the grip that it held for many months on merchants and manufacturers alike and production is now in tighter control than in nearly a decade."

Judging by the encouraging reports that keep coming in steadily increasing volume from all sections of the country, the small manufacturer and the small merchant are recovering more rapidly than the big corporation. As these little fellows exhaust their supplies the improvement in demand should extend to the larger corporations.

NATIONAL CITY REPORT

The National City Bank of New York in its October bulletin expresses the opinion that recovery will be slow but that the low point has been passed.

"Security and commodity prices," the bulletin states, "have given evidence of some tempering of the enthusiasm developed during August. Probably the uncertainties always connected with a national election cause hesitation, though neither party has endorsed policies giving occasion for alarm.

"However, it may be doubted that the campaign is the major factor. There are abundant reasons, without considering politics, for maintaining a temperate view of the improvement, and most of them may be summed up in one reason—namely: the continued inability to do business on profitable terms."

Coolidge Rail Probe Group Starts Work

NEW JOB FOR COOLIDGE

New York, Oct. 7.—(AP)—The name of Calvin Coolidge was being mentioned today as a possible successor to the late Darwin P. Kingsley as chairman of the board of directors of the New York Life Insurance company. Kingsley died last night of a heart ailment in his 76th year. He headed a directorate which included former President Coolidge.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Oct. 7.—The national transportation committee, headed by Calvin Coolidge and named by insurance companies and savings banks to inquire into the ills of railroads, held its organization committee meeting today in its offices at the Empire State building and prepared to report within three months.

Mr. Coolidge was named chairman and Bernard M. Baruch vice chairman, with other members of the group being Alfred E. Smith, Alexander Legge, and Clark Howell.

In its organization statement, the committee revealed that its inquires would not be confined to the single factor of railroads in the nation's transportation system, but would include all forms of transport by land, water, and air.

Lay Troubles to Competition.

In connection with this statement of purpose, it was revealed that the current plight of the railroads is ascribed by carrier officials to unregulated competition from automobile trucks, buses, and barges.

Dr. Harold G. Moulton, president of the Brookings institute, who has participated in many such inquiries, was named chief investigator by the committee and the main burden of inquiry will be placed on his shoulders.

The committee does not expect to hold open hearings, but any one wishing to be heard will be received. Instead it is the purpose of the group to receive briefs from various interested organizations and act on them.

Results of the inquiry will not be presented directly to congress, but Mr. Coolidge indicated the group of savings banks and insurance companies which appointed it undoubtedly would move for some remedial action through legislation.

Coolidge's Statement.

The statement of Mr. Coolidge follows:

"This committee will be known as the national transportation commission. Mr. Baruch will be vice chairman and I shall be chairman. We have engaged quarters in this building—Empire State building. We have also employed Dr. Harold G. Moulton, president of Brookings institute of Washington, as chief investigator. He will make recommendations to the committee as to the retention of other experts.

"Of course the committee has no preconceived ideas as to its recommendations. Its efforts will be directed to investigating all kinds of transportation generally.

Probe All Transportation.

"While primarily I suppose we will be interested in the railroad, consideration of the problems of that industry will involve all allied methods of transportation, on water, by air, and by motor.

"While, of course, we cannot tell how long this investigation will take, it will be our purpose to finish within three months. When the report is finished it will be furnished to all those who have asked us to make the investigation. We do not expect to have any stated plans for meetings, but will convene when our chief investigator believes that he has material to submit to us."

The Wallgreen company yesterday reported sales of $3,647,254 for September as compared with $4,342,133 in the same month last year, a decline of 16 per cent. This was a considerably better sales showing than was made in August when the volume ran 20.8 per cent below last year.

Sales for the first nine months were $34,597,783, which represents a drop of 15.7 per cent from last year's comparable months. On Sept. 30 the company was operating 471 units as compared with 465 the same day last year.

REALTORS RAP CHAIN STORE RENT TACTICS

Natl. Bodies Form Advisory Group.

BY AL CHASE.

Following an all day session yesterday at the Congress hotel, at which realtors and building managers joined forces in bitterly assailing the growing habit of chain organizations going into bankruptcy in order to cancel their leases, a joint advisory committee was named composed of members of the National Association of Real Estate Boards and the National Association of Building Owners and Managers, to advise both property owners and lessees on this development. Frank S. Slosson of the realty firm of Hooker & Slosson of this city was appointed chairman.

FRANK T. SLOSSON. [Wahlquer Photo.]

The other members are: William E. Malm of Cleveland, president of the National Association of Building Owners and Managers; L. V. Du Bois of Cincinnati, chairman of the property management division of the National Association of Real Estate Boards; Clifford Bangs of Washington, D. C., chairman-elect of the brokers' division of the national realty body; Albert Schoenberg of Kansas City, Mo.; E. W. Sippel of Tulsa, Okla.; J. F. Brownlow of Knoxville, Tenn., and Graham Aldis of Aldis & Co., Chicago.

Cigar Chain Is Target.

The United Cigar Stores company was the principal target for most of the speakers. Their demand for a reduction in rent to a 5 per cent basis established on 1931 gross sales was especially criticized. The realty men declared that no new leases should be made for a period longer than one year, and that they should be based on 7 per cent of gross sales for 1931, or a flat rate of not less than 75 per cent of the previous rate.

Francis Manierre of Dibbles and Manierre of this city hinted that certain chain stores were earning more than they cared to admit and that their seeking lower rentals was not justified by their actual profits.

William E. Malm of Cleveland, head of the National Association of Building Owners and Managers, painted the most depressing picture of the situation and also fired some of the hottest shots against the chain store tactics.

"The washing out of rentals by the United Cigar Stores company is inevitable," he said. "Nothing can stop it except perhaps publicity. They've got choice locations and if they don't way to pay tell 'em to get out; kick 'em out the back door. Any location they've got is worth more than 5 per cent on the gross."

"It's the worst situation that has ever confronted the owner of business property," said Mr. Slosson. "We've got to organize to fight it or we'll have nothing but bankruptcies and foreclosures. We've got to do something to protect investments in business real estate. Rental stability has never been so threatened as it is today as a result of these chain stores using bankruptcy in order to try and force down their rents."

Walgreen Executive Replies.

A. S. Bowes, head of the real estate department of the Walgreen company, fired a few shots from the chain store trenches. "There is nothing constructive in killing good tenants with high rents in the hope that other tenants will come along to take the place of the dead ones," he said. "The retailer is down. Don't jump on his face. That won't create the stability that you want. Let's not squabble about technical rights when the unanswerable common sense fact is that rents can't stay so high that they drive retailers out of business."

WHEAT SELLS OFF ¾C TO NEW LOW; CORN ALSO DOWN

BY CHARLES MICHAELS.

Liquidation in the grain markets yesterday drove all deliveries of wheat and rye, as well as May and July corn, to new lows for the season. Under 50c for December wheat there was general selling on stop loss orders and the nearby future broke to 49¼c before free buying by local professionals, shorts and holders of bids was able to stem the decline. At the inside the December showed 5¼c under the high on Tuesday.

While there was a fair rally from the inside figures of the day, the character of the buying of wheat did not impress the trade as of a kind to bring about more than a temporay upturn. The finish was at net losses of ¾@¾c with December at 49¾@50c; May, 55c and July, 56¼c. On October 4, 1931 December wheat sold at 44⅝c, a figure that had been equalled previously by the September future, and represent the lowest prices at which any future has sold on the Chicago Board of Trade since future trading started.

Big Supplies Affect Market.

A canvass of the trade yesterday indicated that the weight of the tremendous stocks of cash wheat in North America which have been accumulated during the last few years through the pool and farm board efforts to hold up the market were largely responsible for the prevailing low level of prices. The recent increased tax on trading in grain futures as well as the so called restrictions on speculative operators also were given as contributing factors. In the background is the constant fear of further political developments.

Aggressive support was given the Winnipeg wheat market, and despite heavy hedging pressure the close there was only ⅝@⅞c lower with the December closing at 50⅛c in Canadian funds. Houses with seaboard and also Chicago connections were active buyers at times in the Canadian market. Liverpool closed ⅝@1c lower with December at 55⅝c, or 6c over Chicago at the time, the widest difference of the season.

Corn Sold For Export.

Foreign demand for cash corn was again in evidence yesterday with sales of 100,000 bushels c. i. f. Montreal reported by local handlers in addition to 90,000 bushels sold late Thursday. The latter grain sold at equal to 6⅝c over Chicago December in American funds.

Break in wheat was the main factor in causing a decline in corn. The December sold down to 25⅞c, and equalled the inside figure of the season while the May was in new ground at 30⅜c. Final trades were ¾c lower at ¼c higher with December finishing at 26¼c; May, 31c, and July, 32½c.

Scattered commission house buying prevented a decline in oats to a new low for the season with the finish at the same prices as the previous day. December was 15⅜c and May, 18⅝c at the last. Rye dropped ⅝c with wheat and rallied slightly, closing ½c lower with December at 32½c, and May, 36c.

Glass Company "Forced" to Reopen Two Factories

The Mississippi Glass company announced today that because of business conditions it had "found it necessary" to start two of its plants for limited operation, one at Washington, Pa., and the other at Morgantown, W. Va. The company said about 300 additional men would be employed.

SOUTH SELLS COTTON; NET CHANGES SMALL

Selling of cotton by the south on an early bulge in American markets satisfied buyers and resulted in price recessions, and a finish at net losses of 4 to 6 points on futures in Chicago, while other markets were more mixed. New York futures being unchanged to 5 points higher, with spots unchanged at 7.05c; New Orleans futures were 5 points lower to 1 point higher, with spots unchanged at 6.95c; Galveston, 6.85c, and Houston, 6.90c.

DRY GOODS.

NEW YORK, Oct. 7.—(AP)—Gray cottons were quiet today with print cloths selling at slight concessions. Percales were easier. Silk goods for immediate use are quieter, and production is being cut as fall orders expire. Better demand was reported in coatings and overcoatings for quick cutting. Rayon was unchanged. Burlaps were quiet.

MOVE TO CHECK PRICE CUTTING AS BUSINESS PERIL

Leaders Point Out Reaction Against Buyer.

BY THOMAS FURLONG.

Two depression problems which have been causing no end of trouble in many lines of industry are price cutting and "bid chiseling." Many small manufacturing companies are teetering on the brink of receivership and many have sought refuge in other lines of activity because of the competitive situations in their industries.

There is a growing feeling among the executives of large corporations that some concerted action is necessary on their part to curb practices which encourage "brutal buying."

It is the converter type of manufacturer, such as the container and box maker, to cite on example, that have been the hardest hit by the fierce price battle waged during the last three years of declining values.

Prices Beaten Down.

Big purchasers in position to dictate terms have in many instances beaten down the prices of their suppliers with disastrous results to the latter. Faced with the dilemma of closing down his shop or accepting the unprofitable business the converter manufacturer usually chose the latter course and prayed for better times.

With the field narrowing down because of failures and the shifting of many companies into other lines the big manufacturers are beginning to feel that their sources of supply should be protected.

Talk of Federal Control.

Government regulation is viewed with alarm by most business men, but even that recourse was suggested at the recent convention of the National Paper Trade association. Charles F. Abbott, executive director of the American Institute of Steel Contruction, told members of the association that the government may be forced to step in unless the fierce price cutting in the more competitive industries is halted.

"If we keep up this selfish, ignorant mad rush for business at any old price, if we fail to advance commodity prices by constructive methods, industry as a whole will be wrecked and so will the government as well as our people," Mr. Abbott declared.

The speaker was referring particularly to the ruthless competitive price cutting by the sellers themselves in their scramble for business. But this is not the only type of price cutting. Another sort which is known in trade circles as "bid chiseling" is frequently even more pernicious.

Bluff Manufacturers.

One manufacturer is called in and asked to submit a bid. After waiting a few days the bidder is called back and told his price is too high and that a competitor is making a better proposition. Frequently the bidder is bluffed into accepting the business at unprofitable terms.

The executive head of the purchasing department of a big Chicago concern said yesterday that this type of chiseling is particularly harmful. The more firmly established and far sighted corporations refrain from the practice, but it remains fairly general, he declared.

One corporation, or even several, acting individually can do little to curb price cutting in the opinion of this executive. It will take concerted action by trade associations of business groups to do away with the more pernicious practices, he said.

More About Home Loan Bank.

In the middle west it has been difficult to obtain money with which to buy a home. The home loan bank law was designed ultimately to eliminate the costly second mortgage, land contract, and other forms of junior financing. It will supply the real need for long term mortgage money at low rates of interest, enabling the home owner to pay off in small monthly installments.

The building and loan associations, insurance companies, cooperative banks, and homestead associations have entered the home financing field. These institutions have never had a place to go for emergency accommodations when a depression comes and people stop investing in home loans, or when payments on loans slow up or cease altogether. They may have no available cash to lend for h w mortgages or for refinancing homes. The need for some means through which they could liquify their perfectly sound long term mortgages was very great.

The Federal Home Loan bank will supply this need. It is designed to be to the home financing business what the federal reserve system is to the commercial and industrial banking field. So that when the system begins to function Oct. 15 the local district bank at Evanston, serving Illinois and Wisconsin, will be able to make advances on mortgages and home financing organizations will have the courage to lend the home owner because of the knowledge that they can get money at once.

The purpose of the home loan bank bill does not stop at caring for the present emergency—to stop immediately dispossession and foreclosure sales of small homes—but is designed to prevent a recurrence of the present distressing conditions in the small mortgage field.

Calls It a Fair Deal.

TO THE EDITOR: We own a home outside of Chicago purchased in 1928 for $4,700. The balance today is $2,900 held by a mail order house. We are behind in our taxes and interest and the company has requested us to quitclaim the property to them in return for twelve months' free rent and the privilege to repurchase the property during that time. My husband works in the steel mills and only gets three days a week pay, and, due to sickness, payments on our home could not be made. Do you think this is a fair deal? A. O.

ANSWER—The company you are dealing with enjoys a very good reputation and, in view of the circumstances and from the facts stated, the deal appears to be fair and equitable. The writer is familiar with conditions in your city and in all probability you will be able to exercise your option.

LARD MARKET STRONGER

Offerings of lard by western packers for January delivery was readily absorbed by local interests and the market had a steadier undertone despite the weakness in cotton and grains. In all a fair business passed with the close on lard futures 2½c to 5c net higher. Liverpool lard was 3d lower on spots and unchanged to 2d higher on futures, the latter on January. Cash trade in lard and meats was fair. Regular lard was $4.52½; loose, $4.40, and leaf, $4.37½. Exports of lard were 1,556,910 lbs and of bacon 125,000 lbs. Trade in fresh pork was fair with the market rather easy, at 8c to 11½c for pork loins. Prices follow:

Cattle and Lambs Also Show Strength.

The hog market turned higher on extremely light receipts yesterday. Arrivals of 10,000 equaled the smallest Friday run of the year. Light and under weight hogs fared best on the rebound and at the high point yesterday showed gains of as much as 25c, compared with the low spot of the preceding session.

The rally came rather unexpectedly, as did the extremely small supplies. Eastern buyers took 30 per cent of the run and were the only aggressive interests in the trade.

Buying on local account was at low ebb, but prices on the rank and file of weighty hogs ruled 5@15c higher for the day, the lively demand for top classes of light having some influence down the list. The peak price reached $4.00. The general average showed a gain of 15c at $3.75, being exactly the same as last Saturday's average.

Cattle Prices Strong.

Strength crept into the cattle market when only 1,000 were unloaded in the stock yards yesterday. Trading dragged because of the plain quality of offerings, but buyers were not in such a bearish mood and seemed satisfied with the sharp cuts they had made in prices earlier in the week. The rank and file of offerings are selling 50@75c and in many places $1.00 lower than a week ago.

Steers selling largely at $6.00@7.50 suffered the sharpest setback this week, though big losses were noted in sales all the way up to $9.00. Prime 1,200@1,400 lb averages lost only 25@35c.

Lambs Also Strengthen.

Lambs shared in the strength yesterday and natives recovered a little of the recent loss. Packers handpicked a few fancy selections as high as $5.50, while city butchers paid $5.40. The bulk of natives sold on local account at $5.25 and under, most buck lambs going at $4.00@4.25. Several carloads of range lambs sold at $5.25 @5.35, with top grades of feeding lambs at $5.15.
